PREFACE

THE two groups of fragments appearing herewith under the title of DOCUMENTS OF JEWISH SECTARIES, were all discovered in the Cairo Genizah, the greatest part of which is now in the possession of the Cambridge University Library, England, and marked as the Taylor-Schechter Collection. They are published here for the first time, each group in a separate volume. The first volume contains the group bearing the title FRAGMENTS OF A ZADOKITE WORK, which title was supplied by me on a hypothesis. The second volume reproduces FRAGMENTS OF THE BOOK OF THE COMMANDMENTS BY ANAN, which title was also supplied by me, but which may be accepted as a certainty. The importance of the first volume, which I have little doubt will prove a valuable contribution to the history of early Jewish Sects, suggested to me the advisability of furnishing the student with an English translation accompanying the text. The risk of giving a translation of such a defective text as the FRAGMENTS OF A ZADOKITE WORK unfortunately represent, was great indeed, and I was fully aware of it. This risk I felt not less when writing the Introduction and the Notes to the text, but I preferred to be blamed for my mistakes and be corrected, than be praised for my prudence of non-committal, which policy I do not always think worthy of a student. All I could do was both in the Introduction and in the Notes to call the attention of the reader to the unfortunate condition of our text. In the Notes in particular, I have especially marked many passages as obscure, the meaning of which was unclear to me. The literalness of the translation, to which I kept throughout, will, I believe, make the inherent shortcomings of the original fairly transparent. Words or phrases based on an emendation of the original which was evident to me are marked by asterisks. No student who has had experience in editing texts can fail to see at once that very little can be taken for certain, and the largest part of the commentary and the conclusions based on it in the Introduction can only be regarded as tentative.

The divisions into paragraphs were supplied by me, so as to enable the student to form some notion of the variety of matter touched upon in our fragments. I must further point out that by some oversight, which is excusable enough in view of the distance of my residence from the place of publication, I had no opportunity to read the last proof of Text A of the first volume. I therefore collated this text again with the manuscript, and this collation resulted in a few new readings, which are incorporated in the Corrections and Additions at the end of the volume, to which especial attention is called. I have added also a facsimile of a page of text A and text B, thus offering an opportunity to scholars to make a fresh search in Genizah material. Nobody will rejoice more than I, if this should lead to the discoveries, though they be made "almost simultaneously," of fresh fragments, which will further elucidate the history of the sect, even should they prove to upset my theories.

Much less was the labour spent upon the second volume, קונטרסים לענין מספר המצות לענין FRAGMENTS OF THE BOOK OF THE COMMANDMENTS BY ANAN. My contribution to its elucidation consists only in giving at the end of the text the necessary references to the Bible. Occasionally references will also be found to Dr A. Harkavy's Studien und Mittheilungen, part 8 (לקוטי קרמוניות), 2nd part, St Petersburg, 1903). I have no further comment to make on it, as the subject does not fall within the province of my studies, except that I hope it will prove a valuable contribution to the early Karaitic literature, and form a subject of discussion by specialists.

In conclusion, it gives me much pleasure to record here my thanks to Professor Israel Friedlaender, of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, in New York, and Professor Henry Malter, of the Dropsie College, in Philadelphia, who were helpful in furnishing me with translations from Kirkisani and other Arabic texts, quoted in my first volume. I have further to record here my thanks to Professor Alexander Marx, of the Seminary, who enriched this volume with many a suggestion. His experience in the reading of manuscripts proved also many a time of great aid to me. To my friend Norman Bentwich of London I am also under obligations for aid given to me in various directions. The Index was prepared by Mr Joseph B. Abrahams, Secretary of the Seminary, who was always at my call during the correction of the proofs, and to whom I express here my best thanks.

S. SCHECHTER.

INTRODUCTION

THE two texts included in this volume reproduce the contents of two fragments in MS. coming originally from the Cairo Genizah and now in the possession of the University Library of Cambridge, England. They form a part of the Taylor-Schechter Collection, and bear the class-marks: T.-S. 10 K 6 and T.-S. 16 311. They will be designated here as Text A and Text B.

TEXT A extending from page 1 to 16 (inclusive) consists of eight leaves, or sixteen pages, measuring  $8\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{1}{8}$  in. The first four leaves, or eight pages, count 21 lines on each page, whilst the last four leaves (or eight pages) differ in the number of lines, pp. 9—12 having 23 lines. Pages 13—16 are mutilated at the bottom of each page, so that it is impossible to determine with any accuracy how many lines they may have had, but it was assumed in the notes that they contained 23 lines as the preceding four pages. The writing is ancient Oriental, in square characters, but rather stiff, and there is very little consistency in such letters as ' , ı, the latter being occasionally so long as almost to be taken for a final ı, whilst the ' is sometimes so large as to be confused with a ı. The ן also greatly resembles the ן, the left stroke reaching the roof of the letter, but this is a feature common to all ancient Oriental MSS. The MS. probably dates from the 10th century. Here and there we have letters provided with Babylonian or Palestinian vowel-points (p. 1, ll. 9, 10, 11, 18, 20, 21; p. 2, ll. 11, 16, 19; p. 3, ll. 8, 9; p. 5, ll. 8, 12, 16, 21; p. 6, ll. 6, 13), but the latter seem to have been added by a hand of a more recent date. Some words are crossed through by the scribe (p. 11, ll. 13, 16; p. 12, l. 17), as indicated in the text. The MS. is possibly defective at the beginning and is certainly so at the end. Pages 13—16 are badly mutilated, both on the edges and at the bottom of the page. The MS. is also torn and obliterated in some other places, by which a few words or letters are affected<sup>1</sup>. Besides the missing pages at the end and at the beginning, there is a lacuna between p. 8 and p. 9, the MS. breaking up at the end of a line, and perhaps in the middle of a sentence. It is impossible to determine how many pages may be missing here. I have also indicated such a lacuna at the end of p. 12, but have subsequently come to the conclusion to consider it as continuous. As will be seen from the Notes, we have here to deal with a very careless scribe, who not only may have had a very poor copy before him, but also disfigured his text in several places by his inability to read his MS. correctly (p. 1, l. 12; p. 3, l. 7; p. 5, l. 15; p. 8, l. 3; p. 10, l. 21; p. 11, l. 9; p. 13, l. 6; p. 16, l. 2, text and notes).

TEXT B, covering pages 19 and 20, consists of one leaf, or two pages, measuring  $13\frac{1}{2} \times 8$  in., written in square characters, but already with a tendency to cursive. Some words are also provided with Babylonian and Palestinian vowel-points (p. 19, ll. 2, 15, 34, 35; p. 20, ll. 2, 3, 7, 8, 11, 14, 16, 19, 20, 24, 33); other words, again, are cancelled by the scribe himself (p. 20, ll. 5-6). It is undoubtedly of a later date than Text A (perhaps the 11th or 12th century), but the scribe must have been more careful and also had a better copy before him. Perhaps it will be more correct to speak of it as another recension of the same Text, as the differences are of such a nature that they cannot always be accounted for by the mere carelessness of the scribe of Text A or by such mere variants inevitable in two MSS. of the same text. This will be best seen by a comparison of the two texts, which on pp. 7-8 overlap each other, and the English translation of which appears in parallel columns.

Apart from the defective state of the MS. owing to age, or the carelessness of the scribe, its whole contents, at least as they are represented by Text A, are in a very fragmentary state, leaving the impression that we are dealing with extracts from a larger work, put together, however, in a haphazard way, with little regard to completeness or order. This is particularly discernible in the legal part. Thus we have on p. 7, l. 8 (=p. 19, l. 5) a reference to the laws concerning vows, which is practically not taken up again till p. 16, l. 5. Page 10, ll. 4-10, again forming the beginning of what we may call the constitution of the Sect and its organization, is suddenly broken off by laws bearing upon Levitical purity, covering about four lines, from which the scribe abruptly passes to Sabbath laws, covering the last ten lines of p. 10, and the whole of p. 11. Then he gives us another law of Levitical purity, covering about a line and a half, but followed by laws bearing upon the Sabbath, upon the relation of the Sect to heathens, upon dietary laws, taking up the larger part of p. 12 (from line 2 to line 15), and concluding with two Levitical purity laws, condensed in two short paragraphs (p. 11, ll. 15-18). It is here where he returns again to the constitution of the Sect and its organization, extending to about the end of p. 14; whilst pp. 15 and 16 represent laws relating to oaths and vows (p. 11, ll. 1-4); laws bearing upon the treatment of penitents (p. 15, l. 5 to end); and again, laws relating to vows and free offerings to the altar. In other parts of the MS. we have the same feeling of abruptness and incompleteness; as for instance, on p. 3, ll. 12—16, where we may assume that the reference to the seasons and festivals was followed by a lengthy exposition of the calendar of the Sect. Possibly the scribe omitted it as being in his view a mere repetition of the Book of Jubilees. Page 4, l. 4, again, הנה פרוש etc., we could expect a list of the names of the leaders of the Sect, and their history; but of this no trace is left in our text.

The language of the MS. is for the most part pure Biblical Hebrew. The first three pages rise even to the dignity of Scriptural poetry, though a good deal of it is obscured by the unfortunate condition in which the text is at present. But there are in it terms and expressions which occur only in the Mishna or even only in the Rabbinic literature dating from the first centuries of the Middle Ages. Such are:

The term בית השתחות (p. 11, l. 22) for a place of worship, even suggests a much later influence. It is, however, not impossible that all such expressions pointing to a later date are mere substitutions by the later scribe for the original terms. The term סרך again (p. 7, l. 6, etc.), occurring frequently in the sense of custom (= מנהג or משפט), is almost entirely unknown otherwise in the Hebrew literature. Strange also is the way in which citations from the Scriptures extending over the greatest part of the Bible are introduced without regard to strict consistency. The usual שנאמר is entirely absent and replaced by כאשר אמר, or ואשר א' (p. 4, l. 20; p. 7, ll. 8, 14, 16; p. 9, l. 2; p. 16, ll. 6, 15; p. 20, l. 16), followed occasionally by the name of the prophet, as אמר משה, or ומשה א' (p. 5, l. 8; p. 8, l. 14; p. 19, l. 26) or אשר אמר ישעיה (p. 6, l. 7) or אשר אמר יחזקאל (p. 19, l. 11). Sometimes, we have even אשר אמר אל or כאשר אמר אל (p. 6, l. 13; p. 8, l. 9; cf. p. 9, l. 7). The same expression is also used with reference to the Pseudepigrapha אשר אמר עליהם לוי בן יעקב<sup>2</sup>. In other places we have the more familiar כאשר כתוב or ככתוב or כתוב ביד (p. 5, l. 1; p. 7, l. 19; p. 9, l. 5; p. 11, ll. 17, 20; p. 19, ll. 1, 7). Sometimes, however, we have embedded whole groups of verses from the Scriptures without any introductory formula whatever, which in some places at least may be due to a mere clerical error (p. 5, l. 13; p. 8, l. 2). Altogether, the quotations from the Scriptures are seldom correctly given, so that sometimes the source is hardly recognizable (p. 2, l. 11; p. 5, l. 14 seq.; p. 7, l. 11; p. 8, l. 3). As a rule these deviations from the Massoretic text are mere textual corruptions of a careless scribe and not to be explained by the variae lectiones suggested by any known version, or quotation by any ancient authority. A specially noteworthy feature to which attention should be drawn is the absence of the Tetragrammaton or any other Biblical appellation for God besides  $\text{יהוה}$ , which is consistently used in both texts.

The contents of the MS. are in their present state about equally divided between Hagada and Halacha. The first part (pp. 1—8), dealing largely with matter of an historical and doctrinal nature, and the second part being chiefly occupied with subjects of a rather legal character. The Hagada as well as the Halacha represent apparently the constitution and the teachings of a Sect long ago extinct, but in which we may perhaps easily detect the parent of later schisms with which history dealt more leniently.

The defective state of the MS. and the corrupt condition of the text in so many places make it impossible to draw a complete picture of the Sect. Yet what remains offers us a few distinct features and salient points enabling us to catch a few glimpses of the history of the Sect, its claims and its relation to the rest of the nation.

First, as to its history: After the completion of 390 years, forming the End of the Wrath (p. 1, l. 5) or as it is termed in another place, "the end of the desolation of the land" (p. 5, l. 20), begun with the delivering of Israel into the hands of Nebuchadnezzar, the King of Babylon, God, we are told, made bud from Israel and Aaron a branch to inherit his land (p. 1, ll. 6, 7). This would bring us to within a generation of Simon the Just, who flourished about 290 B.C. For twenty years, however, closely following the End of the Wrath, Israel was blind, groping its way, because of the evil effects of the erroneous teachings (or waters of lies) of the Man of Scoffing, who led Israel astray. This brings us into the midst of the Hellenistic persecutions preceding the Maccabean revolt (about 176 B.C.). But at last, as it would seem, this scion from Aaron and Israel overcame all difficulties, and was recognized as the Teacher of Righteousness whose mission is to make Israel walk in the ways of God (p. 1, l. 11, and also p. 6, l. 11; p. 20, l. 31), and to undo the evil wrought in a former generation (p. 1, l. 12 and notes).

This Teacher is also called the "Only Teacher," or the "Only One" (p. 20, ll. 1, 32), and is identical with "the Lawgiver who Interprets the Law" (p. 6, l. 7) referred to in connection with the princes and nobles "who went forth out of the land of Judah" (p. 6, ll. 5, 6, 8). The activity of these latter, though representing both Aaron and Israel (p. 6, ll. 2, 3), consisted only in continuing and carrying out the precepts (p. 6, l. 9 במחוקקות)<sup>3</sup> of the Lawgiver, in which they were "to walk in them for all end of the wickedness" (p. 6, l. 10, text and notes). This seems to be the period intervening between the first appearance of the Teacher of Righteousness (p. 1, l. 11) (the founder of the Sect) who was gathered in<sup>4</sup> (or died), and the second appearance of the Teacher of Righteousness who is to rise in "the end of the days" (p. 6, l. 11, text and notes). Moreover, the Only Teacher, or Teacher of Righteousness is identical with משיח or the Anointed One from Aaron and Israel, whose advent is expected by the Sect through whom He made them know His holy spirit (p. 2, l. 12), and in whose rise the Sect saw<sup>5</sup> the fulfilment of the prophecy, "there shall come a star out of Jacob" (p. 7, l. 18; cf. note 18). Apparently this Anointed One was rejected by the great bulk of the nation who "spoke rebellion" against him (p. 5, l. 21; p. 6, l. 1). What must be especially noted is that the Messiah of the Sect is a priest, a descendant from Aaron and Israel<sup>6</sup>. Of a Messiah descending from Judah, there is no mention in our text<sup>7</sup>. Indeed, "after the completing of the end... one shall not join the house of Judah," whilst the princes of Judah, the removers of the bound, will be visited by the wrath of God (p. 4, l. 11; p. 8, l. 3, text and notes). Among these princes, King David is also included, who is held in slight estimation by the Sect (see below, p. xvii). As a contrast to and substitute for David, and his dynasty, the Sect put up Zadok, and his descendants (the sons of Zadok).

These differences, in addition to those still to be discussed, led to a complete separation of the Sect from the bulk of the Jewish nation. We are further told that they left the land of Judah for the North, and settled in the city of Damascus (p. 6, l. 5; p. 7, l. 19; p. 8, l. 21; p. 19, l. 34; p. 20, l. 12). They emigrated there under the leadership of the Star (p. 7, ll. 18, 19), where they established a New Covenant<sup>8</sup>. Unfortunately, there is a lacuna in our text at the end of p. 8, where the story of the Sect in Damascus was probably continued, but we gather from another passage that the Only Teacher found his death in Damascus, but is expected to rise again (p. 19, l. 35; p. 20, l. 1; cf. also p. 6, l. 11). This disappearance, as it seems,

<sup>3</sup> The meaning of the word is not quite certain, but the sense seems to be "the legislative rules laid down by the מחוקק."

<sup>4</sup> The death, or the gathering in of the Teacher is stated in p. 19, l. 35; p. 20, l. 1. See also p. 20, l. 14.

<sup>5</sup> See p. 12, l. 23 (משיח—אהרן), p. 19, l. 10 (משיח אהרן), p. 20, l. 1 (משיח מאהרן), which latter reading is supported by p. 1, l. 7. In p. 14, l. 19 the word משיח or משיח was probably torn off.

<sup>6</sup> Rather obscure is the meaning of וישראל in all these places, unless it indicates that the mother of the Messiah will descend from a lay family. As it appears from p. 6, ll. 2, 3, the Sect insisted that the lay element should be represented in all important functions.

<sup>7</sup> Cf. Test. Reuben 6 8, and Introduction of Dr Charles, p. xcvi.

led to backsliding and apostacy from the Sect, but the backsliders were expelled from the Congregation, and admonished to come back to the Station of men of perfect holiness (p. 20, ll. 3, 4 and 5). In case they persisted in their apostacy, they and their families had no longer a "share in the House of the Torah" (p. 20, ll. 10, 13). They are regarded as the men of scoffing (p. 20, ll. 10, 11), and are cursed by the saints of the Most High (p. 20, l. 8), and no one is to associate with them in wealth and in work (p. 20, l. 7).

Neither these apostacies, however, nor the death of the Only Teacher, affected the fortunes of the Sect to such a degree as to be followed by its immediate extinction. Apparently the Sect continued its existence for a considerable time after these events had taken place. The Sect was constituted of four estates: Priests, Levites, Israelites and Proselytes (p. 14, ll. 3, 6). Its government, however, was placed in the hands of the first three estates (p. 10, ll. 4, 5)<sup>9</sup> consisting of a body of ten men selected of the Congregation, in which the tribe of Levi and Aaron were represented by four and the Israelites by six men (p. 10, ll. 5, 6). Only men between the age of twenty-five and sixty were eligible, who had to be learned in the Book of the Hagu and in the foundations of the Covenant (p. 10, ll. 6—8). At the head of the governing body stood two men, the one a regular priest whilst the other bore the title of Censor (מבקר) an office otherwise unknown in Judaism (p. 13, ll. 2, 5, 6; p. 14, ll. 6, 8). The priest, who had to be a man between thirty and sixty, was expected to be learned in the Book of the Hagu, in all the laws of the Torah (p. 13, l. 2; p. 14, ll. 8, 9), and a part of his office was to record in writing all the members of the settlement by their names in the following order: Priests, Levites, Israelites and Proselytes, as well as to give decisions in certain cases (p. 14, l. 6; see also p. 13, l. 5). More important were the functions of the Censor, who had to be a man between thirty and fifty, and who perhaps, as a rule, represented the lay element<sup>10</sup>, giving instruction "to the many" (p. 13, l. 7) which he even imparts to the Priest (p. 13, ll. 5—6). He is to be first consulted in the case of admission of new members wishing to join the Sect, and to examine them, and to give them their place in it (p. 13, ll. 11—12). Offences committed by members of the Sect are reported to him, and penitents are apparently to apply to him for readmission (p. 9, l. 18 seq., and p. 15, l. 7 seq.). Every litigation and controversy is also brought before him (p. 13, ll. 14, 15)<sup>11</sup>, and together with the Judges, he administers the monthly offerings of the Congregation, out of which the needy and the aged are to be supported

<sup>10</sup> This is the impression one receives from p. 13, ll. 5, 6, where the Censor is put in contradistinction to the Priest. See above, p. xiii, note 6, for the tendency of the Sect to have the lay element represented in all their important offices.

(p. 14, l. 13 seq.). We must assume that a governing body consisting of ten Judges was only required in the case of larger settlements. Their jurisdiction was very extensive, they having the power to inflict capital punishment and banishment on the members of the Sect, besides determining the regular civil cases (p. 9, l. 10; p. 10, l. 1; p. 12, l. 4), but at least a Priest and a Censor were considered a necessity as soon as the population counted at least ten members. If the Priest is not "tried," a Levite takes his place (p. 13, l. 3).

In this manner the Sect organized itself in various cities (p. 12, l. 19) or camps (p. 7, l. 6; p. 14, l. 3), forming there congregations or assemblies (p. 11, l. 23; p. 12, l. 6; p. 13, l. 11; p. 14, l. 10). One city, however, seems to have been set apart as the City of the Sanctuary, the inhabitants of which were submitted to a rigorous observance of certain laws connected with Levitical purity (p. 12, ll. 1, 2). Perhaps it was in this Sanctuary that the altar was placed in which regular sacrifices were brought (p. 11, l. 17), whilst the other settlements were only provided with a house of worship, which also had to be avoided by the unclean (p. 11, l. 22).

Thus far, the history and the constitution of the Sect as suggested by our MS. We come now to its teachings. That the Sect accepted the Canon of the Old Testament needs no further proof. This is clear enough both from its tenets and practices, regulated after the injunctions of the Scriptures as understood by the Sect. In the Halacha as well as in the Hagada we have constant citations from and allusions to almost all the parts of the Scriptures. One of the most important tenets of the Sect bearing upon the Messianic belief is largely based on a passage from the Prophets (p. 3, l. 21), who are further cited in the polemics against its opponents (p. 4, l. 13 seq.; p. 5, l. 13; p. 7, l. 14, etc.). For the practice, of course, it is the Pentateuch which is considered the main authority, cited under the term of Torah, תורה or תורת משה or ספר התורה (see, for instance, p. 5, l. 2; p. 7, l. 7; p. 15, l. 2; p. 16, l. 5; p. 20, l. 13), and forming the particular object of interpretation; though in contradistinction to the Rabbinic usage, the Sect occasionally also derives norms for the practice from the prophetic writings (p. 9, ll. 9—10, text and notes).

But besides the collection of the Books forming the Canon of the Old Testament, the Sect seems also to have considered as sacred certain "external writings," forming a part of the Pseudepigrapha. This can be said with certainty of the Book of Jubilees, which is once quoted by its full name as the Book of the Divisions of the Seasons (p. 16, l. 3 ספר מהלקות העתים), but to which reference is more frequently made without giving the name (see Index sub Book of Jubilees). The same may also be maintained with fair certainty of the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs, to a portion of which, the Testament of Levi (p. 4, l. 15), at least, we have a fairly distinct reference, whilst there are also other allusions to it (see Index). Besides these books still extant, though not exactly in the same shape as they have come down to us, the Sect must have also been in possession of some Pseudepigrapha now lost. This is evident from the reference to Yochaneh and his brother, who opposed Moses on the occasion of Israel's first redemption (p. 5, ll. 17—18, text and notes). In another place we have an allusion to "the Word which Jeremiah has spoken to Baruch, the son of Neriah, and Gehazi, the servant of Elisha" (p. 8, ll. 20, 21), which suggests the existence of Pseudepigraphic works ascribed to these Biblical personages and considered authoritative by the Sect. Perhaps some canonical importance was also given to the ספר ההגו (p. 10, l. 6, and p. 13, l. 2), the nature of which is not quite clear. It does not seem to be identical with the Pentateuch, as this latter is, as pointed out above, cited under the regular title of תורה (see above, p. xv). Together with the ספר ההגו are also mentioned the Foundations of the Covenant, בספר ההגו ויסודי הברית (p. 10, l. 6). This might suggest that the Sect was in possession of some sort of a manual containing the tenets of the Sect, and perhaps also a regular set of rules of discipline for the initiation of novices and penitents.

The loyalty to the Prophets on the one hand, and the recognition of the Book of Jubilees and other Pseudepigrapha as authoritative writings, mark the Sect with special features distinguishing it both from the majority of Jews (as represented by the Pharisees), and from the Samaritans, the most ancient Sect in Israel; the former being hostile to all the books not forming a part of our present Canon, and the latter rejecting even the authority of the Prophets.

Another point of supreme importance separating them both from Jew as well as Samaritan is the regulation of the calendar. The Sect looks upon itself as the remnant unto which God revealed "the hidden things in which all Israel erred: His Holy Sabbaths and His glorious festivals, the testimony of His righteousness and the ways of His truth and the desires of His will which a man shall do and live by them" (p. 3, ll. 13—16; cf. p. 6, ll. 18—19). It need hardly be pointed out that this passage is a mere paraphrase of the passage in the Book of Jubilees: "And all the children of Israel will forget, and will not find the path of the years, and will forget the new moons, and seasons, and Sabbaths, and they will go wrong as to all the order of the years<sup>12</sup>." The "hidden things" are, in the Book of Jubilees, disclosed to the Sect by a special revelation<sup>13</sup>, but the calendar of this Pseudepigraphic work differs in the most important essentials both from that of the Pharisees and from that of the Samaritans (see below, p. xx).

It is, however, the Pharisees, in particular, against whom the polemics of the Sect are directed. They are, as it seems, dubbed as "the builder of the wall," or "fence," referring probably to their motto, "Make a fence to the Torah" (p. 4, l. 19; p. 8, l. 18, and p. 19, l. 31, text and notes). The accusations the Sect brings against their antagonists are both of a general and of a specific nature. They are denounced in our Text as transgressors of the Covenant, removing statutes and given to persecution of the righteous, and despising the upright whom they turn over to the sword, against whose soul they gather (p. 1, ll. 20, 21)<sup>14</sup>. They are the children of destruction, and, at least implicitly, they are accused of appropriating moneys belonging to the Sanctuary, robbing the poor, making the widows their prey, and murdering the orphans (p. 6, ll. 15, 16).

The adduced reproaches are of a general nature, forming in the main a mere paraphrase of certain Scriptural verses applied by the Sect without much discrimination to their opponents (notes to p. 1, l. 20; p. 6, l. 16, etc.). There is also to be taken into account that the parallel passages as offered in p. 8, ll. 5—9, suggest that these accusations can hardly be applied in their entirety to the Pharisees. For we have there also the complaint that their antagonist "cast off restraint with an high hand to walk in the ways of the wicked." But as is clear from the context these "wicked" can be none else but the Greeks<sup>15</sup>. The denunciation must accordingly refer to the Hellenistic Party, in part, at least, unless there are some words missing in our Text. But we have, as already indicated, accusations of a very specific nature, and these leave no doubt that the object of the Sect's general abuse was mainly the Pharisees. The first of these accusations is polygamy, the opponents of the Sect being ensnared by two (wives) described in our text as "fornication" (p. 4, ll. 20, 21). It is in this connection that David (who married eighteen wives) is ruled out of court as one ignorant of the contents of the Law, which was only discovered with the rise of Zadok (p. 5, ll. 2, 3, 5).

This prohibition, as it must be specially pointed out, extends also to divorce, or rather to marrying a second wife, as long as the first wife is alive though she had been divorced<sup>16</sup>. This is followed by another accusation that <sup>14</sup> The "man of scoffing who dropped to Israel waters of deceitfulness" (or lies) (p. 1, ll. 14, 15; p. 4, l. 10, note 10 and p. 8, l. 14) and is the cause of all these evils, is perhaps identical with the Commanding One of p. 4, ll. 19, 20, of whom the same metaphor (מטִיף) is used, and is, as apparent from the context, responsible not for new revelations but for false interpretation of the Law. Is he the head of the men of scoffing of p. 20, l. 11, who are the special opponents of the New Covenant?

<sup>15</sup> See p. 8, ll. 9—11, רֵאשׁ מַלְכֵי יוֹן, unless we should assume that in his preference for a Scriptural term the writer used the word יוֹן for Rome (which latter does not occur in the Bible) without any regard to accuracy.

<sup>16</sup> See notes to p. 4, ll. 20, 21. Cf. also p. 7, l. 1; p. 8, ll. 6, 7. About the prohibition of polygamy among the Samaritans, see Kirchheim, p. 20. Cf. Montgomery, p. 43. According to the evidence of R. Eleazar b. Tobiah in his Lekach Tob to Deut. 21 5 (p. 35*b*, ed. Wilna), the Karaites also forbade marriage with two women (cf. Poznanski, Revue, 45, p. 186). About the Zadokites, see below, p. xix.

their opponents "defile" the Sanctuary, inasmuch as they do not separate according to the Law, and neglect (according to the interpretation of the Sect) certain laws concerning נדרה (p. 5, ll. 6, 7). Then a protest follows against the permission to marry one's niece, accompanied by an argument proving it to belong to the forbidden degrees (p. 5, ll. 7—11). But, both the case of נדרה and not less this case of עריות belong to the group of laws forming the subject of the most heated controversies between the Samaritans and the Karaites on the one side, and the Pharisees (or Rabbinic Judaism) on the other<sup>17</sup>. The point at issue in the law of נדרה is not given by our author, but in that of עריות he agrees with the Samaritans and Karaites, and we may conclude that this is also the case with נדרה. Likewise, the laws concerning the Sabbath, that play such an important part with the Sect, agree in the main with those given in the Book of Jubilees, to which also the Samaritan and the Karaitic codes offer some important parallels, but they differ in many respects from the Pharisaic practice<sup>18</sup>. The few dietary laws, again, as well as laws relating to Levitical purity contained in this Text, show a strong divergence from the Pharisaic custom<sup>19</sup>; and the same may be remarked of the laws bearing upon the annulling of vows which the Sect seems to forbid altogether<sup>20</sup>.

The annals of Jewish history contain no record of a Sect agreeing in all points with the one depicted in the preceding pages. But sufficient traces and traits seem to have been left of it in the accounts of the earlier sects to justify us in advancing an hypothesis towards its identity. I am thinking of the Sect of the Zadokites to which reference is to be found in the early Karaite writings. Thus, we are told by Kirkisani in his Book of Lights and the High Beacons (written about 637), "Zadok was the first who exposed the Rabbanites and contradicted them publicly. He revealed a part of the truth and composed books in which he frequently denounced the Rabbanites and criticised them. But he adduced no proof for anything he said, merely saying it by way of statement, except in one thing, namely, in his prohibition against marrying the daughter of the brother, and the daughter of the sister. For he adduced as proof their being analogous to the paternal and maternal aunt<sup>21</sup>." Now, this description of the Zadok book well fits our Text which, in its Hagada, is largely polemical, whilst its Halacha affords little else than mere statements. A real argument and refutation of the opposite opinion we have only, as stated by Kirkisani, in the case of prohibiting the marriage with one's niece, which struck Kirkisani the more, as use is made there of the interpretary rule of Analogy or הִקְטָ with which the Karaites operate so much in their marriage laws<sup>22</sup>.

Of the laws peculiar to the Zadokites, only two are recorded by Kirkisani. The one is that they "absolutely forbade divorce, which the Scriptures permitted<sup>23</sup>." In the chapter, again, treating of Jesus, and his followers, the Nazarenes, he remarks, "Jesus forbade divorce as the Zadokites forbade it<sup>24</sup>." A similar remark he has about Obadiah of Ispahan (or Abu-Isa), who "forbade divorce as the Zadokites and the Nazarenes forbade it<sup>25</sup>."

Hadasi's evidence is to the same effect, namely, that Obadiah of Ispahan (or Abu-Isa), like the Zadokites, forbade divorce in all cases; which, he declares, is not in agreement with the word of God. In a similar manner, he expresses himself in another place, where he censures the religion of the Zadokites for the same prohibition as being against the Scriptures<sup>26</sup>. But as pointed out above, this is just the view of the Sect which regarded a second marriage during the lifetime of the first husband, even after divorce, as fornication. (See above, p. xvii.)

The second law which Kirkisani attributes to the Zadokites and to which he likewise objects is in connection with the calendar. "They (the Zadokites) also fixed all the months at thirty days each. It is possible that they relied in this on the story of Noah. Again, they excluded the day of the Sabbath from the sum of the days of the feast of Passover, so as to make them seven days besides the Sabbath. In the same way also with the feast of Tabernacles<sup>27</sup>." Hadasi practically repeats the same fact without adding anything fresh to it<sup>28</sup>.

What is meant by the story of Noah, we learn from another place in Kirkisani, and from Japheth's Commentary to Gen. 1 14, and Lev. 25 5. According to this testimony the Zadokites or Zadok made reference to the account of the deluge which lasted 150 days (Gen. 8 3), beginning with the 17th of the second month (Gen. 7 11) and ending on the 17th of the seventh month (Gen. 8 4), thus covering five months. This proves that each month counted thirty days<sup>29</sup>. The same argument is indicated in the paraphrase which the Book of Jubilees gives of Gen. 8 3, "And the water prevailed on the face of the earth five months—one hundred and <sup>22</sup> See p. 5, ll. 8—11. The only other place where the Sect adduces something like an argument in an Halachic question, is p. 4, l. 21 and p. 5, l. 1, but in this point the Karaites differed as much from our Sect as the Rabbanites, as we shall see presently, whilst Kirkisani only speaks of the criticism of the Rabbanites.

fifty days<sup>30</sup>." Now, the fixing of the calendar is just one of the most important points in which this schism showed itself. The Sect (as we have seen, p. xv) accepted the calendar given by the Book of Jubilees, which at once separated them both from Jew and Samaritan. But as we learn from these documents, the difference consisted chiefly in the fact that the Book of Jubilees accepted the solar year of twelve months, of thirty days each, and four intercalary days<sup>31</sup>. It is true that our Fragment contains no distinct reference either to the thirty days or to the argument from the story of Noah. But we must never forget that our Text consists, as explained above, only of extracts from a larger work (see above, p. x), and it is easily possible that Kirkisani was in possession of this larger work, whilst the scribe of our text, in his careless manner, thought it sufficient to indicate, in a general way, the existence of serious differences in the calendar between the Sect and its opponents, but omitted the details as known from the Book of Jubilees. It is also possible that our copyist relegated these details to the Halachic part, represented in our MS. only by a fragment, just as he did with the laws relating to the Sabbath, or to the annulling of vows<sup>32</sup>, whilst Kirkisani was in the possession of a complete copy. On the other hand, when a certain Karaite, Hasan ben Mashiach, in his controversy against R. Saadya (with regard to the calendar) attested that "the writings of the Zadokites are known among people, but they contain nothing of what that man (Saadya) mentioned; that there are in the writings of the Zadokites (various) things in which they differed from the Rabbanites in the Second Temple, with regard to sacrifices, etc., but there is not even a single letter like that which the Fayyomite reported<sup>33</sup>," we may assume that

<sup>31</sup> See above, p. xvi. This would agree with Beer's interpretation of the calendar of the Jubilees, in his Das Buch der Jubiläen (Leipzig, 1856). See Jub., the whole of ch. 6 text and notes, and references given there to the various explanations of the calendar of the author of the Book of Jubilees; to which is only to be added Epstein's discussion of this subject in his Eldad ha-Dani, pp. 155—161, but which is practically only a résumé of his article in the Revue referred to by Dr Charles. Epstein's suggestion that the Book of Jubilees has two kinds of years, an ecclesiastical year and a civil year, settles, it is true, many a difficulty in the text of the Book as it has come down to us. But it is not impossible that the original reading which was in possession of the Sect differed greatly from the present text. We have only to assume that in the case of Shabuoth, the Sect did not press the fifteenth of the month, taking it to mean the middle of the month or near it. Assuming the ממחרת השבת

(Lev. 23 11—15, see Jub. 15 1, text and notes) to mean the whole feast of Passover, and ignoring the Sabbath of the Passover which the Zadokites, as we have seen, do not count, the sheaf-waving would take place on the 23rd, and the feast of Shabuoth would thus (allowing in accordance with Beer 30 days for both Nissan and Iyar) fall on the 12th of Sivan, which agrees with the Falashic tradition.

<sup>32</sup> See, for instance, p. 6, l. 18, and cf. p. 10, l. 14 to end of p. 11. Cf. also p. 7, l. 7 and p. 16, l. 6 seq.

<sup>33</sup> See Poznanski, Revue, vol. XLIV. pp. 176, 177. Cf. also his Karaite Literary Opponents of Saadya Gaon, pp. 15, 16. See also Hilgenfeld, Ketzergeschichte, p. 160, note 271, and reference given there to Geiger. How confused and contradictory the notions about the Zadokite calendar were, is also clear from another passage of an earlier Karaite who thought that they began the month on the 15th after the New Moon, when the moon is in its full strength. See Poznanski, Revue, vol. XLIV. p. 172.

he had a copy something similar to ours in which the calendar differences were given only in a general way, while the Halachic part had more extracts relating to sacrifice than ours. The divergence between the testimony as to the nature of the Zadok books known to writers in the tenth century may thus be easily attributed to the difference in the texts used by the different scholars of that period. Our Text may thus, with good reason, be defined as containing extracts from a Zadok book, representing features contained in the copies of these authorities, but as it forms only extracts, these features are sometimes partly obscured; whilst other features may be entirely eliminated. But this does not in any way contend against the likelihood of their being of Zadokite origin.

This likelihood is raised, in a measure, to a degree of certainty when we consider the fact that it is the Zadokites from which the Sect derived its spiritual pedigree. It is to a Zadok to which the Sect ascribes the merit of having rediscovered the Law, in which act he is favourably contrasted with David, who was ignorant of it (p. 5, l. 5; cf. above, p. xiii). Who this Zadok was, of the many persons bearing this name in the Bible, it is impossible to say. At any rate, the impression is that he was a Biblical personage<sup>34</sup>. But it is not only to the remote past to which the Sect appeals; the Zadokites or rather the Sons of Zadok, according to the Sect, form the "sure house of Israel," and are apparently connected with them who "held fast to the commandments of God," and who were in possession of the hidden things—of the calendar (p. 3, ll. 12 seq., 19 and 26). They are, indeed, those who remained loyal to the Sanctuary, the very chosen ones of Israel, called by name, that arose at the end of the days, and who apparently kept a Station מעמד, and were connected with the government of the Sect (p. 4, ll. 1—5; cf. also p. 2, l. 9, text and notes). A book emanating from such a sect might plausibly be regarded as the writings of the Zadokites, or as a Zadok book.

The term Zadokites naturally suggests the Sadducees; but the present state of knowledge of the latter's doctrines and practices does not offer enough points of resemblance to justify the identification of them with our Sect<sup>35</sup>. At present it seems to me that the only ancient Sect which comes here into consideration is the Dosithean, for our Sect has left so many <sup>34</sup> Perhaps we have here some reminiscence of the well-known Hagada given by Rashi and Kimchi in their commentary to 2 Kings 22 8. According to this, King Ahaz during his reign burnt the Torah, but they saved one copy which they hid between the rubble of the walls of the Temple, which was discovered by the High Priest Hilkiyah during the reign of King Josiah when they were occupied with the repair of the walls.

<sup>35</sup> It need hardly be pointed out that there are both in the Hagada and in the Halacha of our Sect features which strikingly recall the famous hypothesis of Geiger regarding the Sadducees and the Old Halacha. But this hypothesis is still so undeveloped in its details, that it seems better to leave the subject in abeyance. It is a further and larger question whether we have to deal with a sort of counter-tradition or with an interpretation claiming to go back to primitive Judaism.

marked traces on the accounts which have come down to us about the Dositheans that we may conclude that they were in some way an offshoot from the schism which is the subject of our inquiry. The accounts of the Dosithean sect are, as is well known, contradictory and confusing. They vary in date, in the characterization of the sect, and in the description of its origin. There is no need to reproduce them here, or to give the various attempts which have been made to explain them, or to reconcile their various contradictions. Yet almost all these accounts, contradictory as they may be in other respects, offer the one or the other traces of the characteristics of our Sect, which suggest, if not an identity with, at least the descent from our Sect, which should be noted here<sup>36</sup>.

Thus, the testimony of several early accounts of the Dosithean sect connects in some way or another the Dosithean schism with that of the Sadducees, or puts it at least chronologically very close to the latter. This feature reminds us strongly of our Sect, which derived its spiritual pedigree, as we have seen, from the Zadokites. Some accounts go even to the length of making Zadok a disciple of Dositheus, which we may take as a mere overstatement of the high antiquity of the Sect<sup>37</sup>. If Abul-Fath goes as far as to speak of a sect called Dustan, which arose in the time of Alexander the Great<sup>38</sup>, it may mean that the Sect claimed to have its origin in a parent sect dating from the Greek period preceding the Maccabean reign. This would fairly correspond with the claims of our Sect, which places the first appearance of its founder 390 years after the desolation of the Land by Nebuchadnezzar, which would bring us, as I have pointed out, to within a generation of Simon the Just, who flourished about 290 B.C. Such a date could easily be brought, it may be remarked in passing, into connection with the Zadok of the "Aboth d'Rabbi Nathan" who, according to Jewish tradition, was the disciple of Antigonus of Soko, the disciple of Simon the Just, and the originator of the Sadducean heresy<sup>39</sup>. I must, however, remark that I have my doubts about the integrity of the Text relating to this date. For our calculation would necessitate the assumption that the author of our Text knew more of the Persian chronology than either the great majority of the Jews or the Samaritans, which is not likely. As pointed out in the notes to our Text, it is probable that we have to read (p. 1, l. 6) ארבע instead of שלוש (490) corresponding with the seventy weeks of years of Dan. 9 2, 24. This cycle of years, however, as we know, is never exact, and may be adapted by any apocalyptic writer to any event in history which struck him as the great crisis in the history of the nation or even of his Sect. Such a crisis evidently took place when the Sect escaped to the North and sought refuge in Damascus (p. 4, l. 2, and p. 7, ll. 13, 14). But no such occurrence is recorded in Jewish history<sup>40</sup>. We are practically left without any definite date. But at any rate, the claims of our Sect were for a very high antiquity, which further receives support from the reference in our Text, on p. 8, l. 11, to the head of the Kings of Javan, though our Text, in its present condition, shows Roman influences<sup>41</sup>. It is thus not to be wondered at if the Dositheans, as an offshoot of our Sect, made the same pretensions, and even exaggerated them.

Another point of contact between our Sect and the Dositheans is the calendar, both fixing thirty days for every month of the year<sup>42</sup>. The testimony of Abul-Fath is most emphatic on this point when he says, "They (the Dositheans) abolished the reckonings of their astronomical tables. All their months consist of exactly thirty days. They abolished the true festivals and removed the commandments of the fasts and the afflictions<sup>43</sup>." When Abul-Fath proceeds to say that they count the fifty days from the morrow after the Passover, as the Jews do, the similarity with the Jews probably consisted in this, that they interpreted the מחרת השבת (Lev. 23 11, 15) to mean the Feast (in contradistinction to the Sadducees who took that word to mean the Sabbath); but, on the other hand, they differed from the Jews in that they understood by it the last day of the Feast, or the seventh day of the Passover (see above, p. xx, note 31). Abul-Fath further bears evidence to the strictness of the Dositheans in their observance of the Sabbath, a fact which is also recorded with more or less variation by some Fathers of the Church. This is a feature which we observe also in our Sect, though the details given by Abul-Fath and the Fathers are not the same, and it may be that they have been misunderstood by the former<sup>44</sup>. The statement of Epiphanius is more general, when he says, "In the <sup>40</sup> One can only think of the conjecture of Juynboll, in his Commentarii in historiam gentis Samaritanæ, Leyden, 1846, according to which a number of Samaritans might have emigrated to Damascus, the capital of Antiochus Cyzicenus, their ally in the wars with John Hyrcan, in which they were defeated, which took place somewhere between 128 and 106 B.C. Kirchheim, p. 9, gives this as a fact, but practically there is no authority for it whatever, except this guess by Juynboll.

<sup>41</sup> For instance, the office of the Censor, occurring frequently in our Text. (See p. 9, l. 18, and elsewhere.) Such an office, entirely unknown to Judaism, could have been only borrowed from the Romans. We must also remark that these denunciations of the Pharisees could hardly relate to the Greek times. As far as historical evidence goes, the Pharisees could only have made their power felt at a much later date.

<sup>44</sup> See Abul-Fath, ibid. Cf. our Text, p. 10, l. 22 to p. 11, l. 17, text and notes. See also Epiphanius, ibid., and Origen, De Principiis, IV. 17. In his statement there that they remained over the Sabbath in the same position until the evening, he probably same way they observe Circumcision and the Sabbath," by which he probably means their rigour in observing it<sup>45</sup>. When he further says, that "they have no intercourse with all people because they detest all mankind," we may readily recognize here the law of our Sect requiring the washing of the clothes when they were brought by a Gentile (because of contamination), and the prohibition of staying over the Sabbath in the vicinity of Gentiles<sup>46</sup>. His statement that the Dositheans had their own forms of government is also borne out by any number of passages in our text in which the government of the Sect forms a special feature<sup>47</sup>. His statement, again, that they abstain from eating living creatures may have some connection with the law in our Text on p. 12, l. 11, which may perhaps be understood to imply that the Sect forbade honey, regarding it as אבר מן החי (a limb cut off from a living animal), which would agree with the testimony of Abul-Fath that they forbade the eating of eggs, except those which were found in a slaughtered fowl<sup>48</sup>. More difficult is it to know what Epiphanius exactly meant when he said that "some of them abstain from a second marriage, but others never marry." The text is not quite certain at this point. But may we not perceive in it, at least, an echo in some way of the law of the Sect prohibiting a second marriage as long as the first wife is still alive<sup>49</sup>?

What is more remarkable is that even in the dogmatic teachings of the Dosithean Sect, to which most writers attribute a somewhat gnostic aspect, placing the Sect practically outside the confines of Judaism, traces may be found strongly reminiscent of our Sect. Epiphanius is probably right when, against almost all the others, he maintains that the Dositheans believed in resurrection<sup>50</sup>. The statement by most Fathers of the Church that the Dositheans denied the Prophets is probably only due to the confusion with the Samaritans. On the other hand, the assertion of Photius that Dositheus was particularly hostile to Judah, one of the twelve patriarchs, and that the Dositheans declared their founder to be the Messiah, is in harmony with the tendency of our Sect and the claims for their founder<sup>51</sup>. Sharastani's account that they recognized in Dostan the Star, and declared him as the Only One (which is the Messiah), recalls also the claims of our Sect who speak of their founder as the Star, and apply to him the name of the Only Teacher<sup>52</sup>. It may confused it with another Sect. But see also Abul-Fath, 151 (Montgomery, 257), where we have some similar statement regarding the adherents of Dusis, that if they travelled at all on the Sabbath, they did not take their hands out of their garments. See Wreschner, p. 15.

further be suggested that it is not impossible that the term the "Standing One" (ἑστώς, or stans) to be met in patristic literature in the accounts of Dositheus or Simon Magus, has its origin in the Men of the Station with whom we meet in our Text, and who were apparently looked upon as the leaders of the Sect<sup>53</sup>.

We may further remark here that the Falashas, whose connection with the Dositheans had already been suggested by Beer, show also certain features strongly reminiscent of our Sect<sup>54</sup>. To the feature of the calendar, reference has already been made above<sup>55</sup>. To this may be added the fact which we learn now from the Te-Ezaza Sanbat of the strong similarity of the Sabbath laws with those given in the Book of Jubilees, and hence also with those expounded in our Text<sup>56</sup>. The law, again, occurring in our Text, of submitting cloths brought by a Gentile to a special purification has a parallel in the testimony of several travellers, according to which the Falashas change their dress and take a bath after having come into contact with a Christian or a Mohammedan<sup>57</sup>. We know also that the Falasha law prohibited the marriage of a niece, threatening all the terrors of Hell for its transgression, which affords another point of similarity with the laws of our Sect<sup>58</sup>. Another point of agreement worth mentioning here is the tradition regarding Zadok's rediscovery of the Law, which may, as suggested above, be responsible for the claim of the Falashas that it was Azariah, the son of Zadok, who brought with him the scroll of the Law to Abyssinia<sup>59</sup>. The term, again, בית השתחות, is strongly reminiscent of the Falashas' Mesgeed, and may perhaps be ascribed to the influence of some Falasha scribe. But on the other hand, it should not be forgotten that the Falashas hope for the restoration of Zion and Jerusalem, and their veneration for the House of David is strongly in contrast with the tendency of our Sect.

We may, then, formulate our hypothesis that our text is constituted of fragments forming extracts from a Zadok book, known to us chiefly from the writings of Kirkisani. The Sect which it represented, did not however pass for any length of time under the name of Zadokites, but was soon in some way amalgamated with and perhaps also absorbed by the Dosithean Sect, and made more proselytes among the Samaritans than among the Jews, with which former sect it had many points of similarity. In the course of time, however, the Dosithean Sect also disappeared, and we have only some traces left of them in the lingering sect of the Falashas, with whom they probably came into close contact at an early period of their (the Falashas') existence, and to whom they handed down a good many of their practices. The only real difficulty in the way of this hypothesis is, that according to our Text the Sect had its original seat in Damascus, north of Palestine, and it is difficult to see how they reached the Dositheans, and subsequently the Falashas, who had their main seats in the south of Palestine, or Egypt. But this could be explained by assuming special missionary efforts on the part of the Zadokites by sending their emissaries to Egypt, a country which was especially favourable to such an enterprise because of the existence of the Onias Temple there<sup>60</sup>. The severance of the Egyptian Jews from the Palestinian influence (though they did not entirely give up their loyalty to the Jerusalem Sanctuary), prepared the ground for the doctrines of such a Sect as the Zadokites in which all allegiance to Judah and Jerusalem was rejected, and in which the descendants of the House of Zadok (of whom indeed Onias himself was one) represented both the Priest and the Messiah.

This is the only workable hypothesis I am able to offer at present. But whatever its destiny—for the condition of our Text precludes certainty and invites difference of opinion—one result which I am about to state seems to me to be beyond any doubt. And this is that it is among the sects severed from the general body of Judaism in which we have to look for the origin of such Pseudepigraphic works as the Book of Jubilees, the Book of Enoch, the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs, and similar productions,—and not in Pharisaic Judaism.

This fact was recognized more than half a century ago by Beer, who thus expressed himself with regard to the Book of Jubilees:—"Its whole type is a peculiar one, and is apparently based on a sectarian foundation." But this is also the characteristic which may be applied to the Book of Enoch and the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs, which are so closely related to one another, all of which grew up on sectarian soil<sup>61</sup>. And surely this is the only possible view which could be formed of this class of writings by any scholar who has ever made a proper study of Rabbinic literature, such as the Mishna, the Talmud, and the "great Midrashim." Passing from these genuine Rabbinic works to the Pseudepigraphic class of literature, he feels transported to another world—from a world of interpretation and argument to a world of fiction. It is not any longer the living voice of the school to which he is listening, but the dead imaginings of some writer impersonating the heroes of remote antiquity. The Rabbinic literature indeed occasionally gives either in the way of overstatement or bona-fide as authority for a law or an ordinance or a moral precept the name of a patriarch or prophet. Such cases, however, are exceptional, and are rooted chiefly in tradition<sup>62</sup>. On the other hand, with the writer of the Pseudepigrapha, the exception is the rule. He is a regular book maker, in which the masquerade feature is developed into a fine art, whilst, as a schismatic, he is not satisfied to form a link in the chain of tradition, but endeavours to appear himself as the source of tradition. His revelations are not in harmony with custom and usage, and must therefore be dated back to the Biblical or patriarchal times. This is a form of authorship absolutely unknown to "official Judaism" of the early centuries, if by "official Judaism" is understood Pharisaism which formed the large bulk of the nation, which identified itself with the Synagogue, which taught in the schools, and largely also controlled the service in the Temple. Parallel passages, it is true, to some of the contents of the Pseudepigrapha are to be found in Rabbinic literature. But these are chiefly offered by the Chapters of R. Eliezer and other works of a similar nature, all of them dating from a comparatively late period. Indeed, they are themselves a sort of Pseudepigrapha of unknown origin, only that their heroes are mostly Rabbinic heroes, such as R. Eliezer b. Hyrcanus, R. Akiba, R. Ishmael, etc., instead of Biblical heroes. They differ from the old productions, both in style and in tendency, and they are not above the suspicion of having already made use both of Christian and even of Mohammedan sources<sup>63</sup>.

It was only of late years that different kinds of Pharisaism were discovered<sup>64</sup>, each of them represented by the one or the other Pseudepigraphic works. We even went so far as to perceive in the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs a Midrash, portions of which were read to the suspected woman under the sanction of the High Court of Justice<sup>65</sup>. This hardly needs <sup>62</sup> See, for instance, Mishna, Eduyyoth, 8. 7, where R. Joshua says, "I received it from R. Jochanan b. Zakkai, who heard it from his master, and his master from his master, a law unto Moses from Mount Sinai," that Elijah's mission before the advent of the Messiah will only be in a certain given way.

<sup>63</sup> Even the book, סדר אליהו רבה, attributed to the Prophet Elijah, does not eliminate the features of interpretation and tradition. In many portions, it is nothing else but a running commentary in the regular style of the Midrash to the texts from the Bible (cf. Friedmann's Introduction, p. 132); whilst the term הכמים is frequently turning up as authority for certain statements. Sometimes, even the names of the Rabbis are given (Friedmann, ibid., pp. 59, 60).

refutation. As far, at least, as the Rabbinic literature is concerned, there is not the slightest indication justifying such a statement. The general impression we receive from the Rabbinic literature, which remains, after all, the only authoritative source for the teachings of the Pharisees, is that they had a deep aversion to all "external writings," though not all the Rabbis were equally severe in their judgment upon it as, for instance, was R. Akiba. Hence, it is not likely that they would have indulged in the production of a literature towards which they all maintained a more or less hostile attitude. And this impression is now confirmed by our Text. For whatever difficulties the present unsatisfactory state of our MS. may place in the way of the student, and whatever doubts may prevail as to the meaning of this or that passage, one thing is certain, that we have to deal here with a Sect decidedly hostile to the bulk of the Jews as represented by the Pharisees. It is a Sect equipped with additional sacred books of its own, a calendar of its own, and a set of laws of its own, bearing upon various commandments of the Scriptures. It is at variance with the nation at large in its interpretation of the past, abusing its heroes, as in the case of David (p. 5, ll. 2—5), and the princes of Judah (p. 4, l. 11; p. 7, ll. 13, 14; p. 8, l. 3), nor does it share its hopes and aspirations for the future, the Messiah expected by the Sect being an offspring from Aaron. The Covenant of the Forefathers is an expression turning up again and again (p. 1, l. 4; p. 4, l. 9; p. 6, l. 2; p. 8, l. 18 [= p. 19, ll. 30, 31])<sup>66</sup>, but it is the Sect apparently on whom both the duties and the privileges devolve at a later period. They who builded the Fence (thus trying to be saved by their own merits), failed to understand the significance of God's love of the Fathers, and the import of His oath to them<sup>67</sup>, wherefore God hated them, whilst the Covenant of the Fathers belongs to the others (the members of the Sect). Indeed, these latter are the "sons" of the Book of Jubilees, who convict colony" (J. Q. R. v. p. 406, note 1), which need not be discussed here. With regard to the Testaments, however, I will only refer here to Bacher, Agada der Tannaiten, 2 ed., p. 457, where the real explanation of the בכתובים הראשונים is given. It is to be further remarked that Fer. Sotah, 16 d, omits these words. Personally, I have little doubt that בכתובים הראשונים is a corruption of לאבות הראשונים, this term being also applied to the heads of the tribes and other men of early times. (Cf. Mechilta 48a, and Aboth d' R. Nathan, 13 b.) Hence, his urging the מאבותם (Job 15 18). This view receives strong support from the version of the Midrash Haggadol ואומרים לפניו דברים שאינה כראי לשמען היא וכל משפחת בית אביה כגון מעשה ראובן בכלה ומעשה יהודה בתמר ומעשה אמנון באחותו ינ' אשר חבמו יגדו ולא כי"ח מאבו" מה שבר נטלו על כך להם לברם ניתנה הארץ. See also Midrash Haggadol to Gen. p. 681. Cf. also Maimonides, Hilchoth Sotah, 3. 2. Perhaps I may remark here that Dr Charles' statement that even the Talmud (Kiddushin, 66 a) describes him (John Hyrcanus) as a second David (ibid., lii.), is incorrect. There is nothing of the kind there, the name David not occurring at all, and the impression is rather that the Pharisees did resent his wearing two crowns.

<sup>66</sup> It is noteworthy that reference to the ברית in one way or another occurs not less than 35 times in this short text.

their fathers and their elders of forsaking the Covenant<sup>68</sup>, or as those who "have forgotten commandment and covenant, and feasts, and months and Sabbaths and jubilees, and all judgments<sup>69</sup>,"—that is, the men who differed in the interpretation of the meaning of the Covenant and the rules for the "feasts and months and Sabbaths and jubilees and all judgments" from the principles laid down in the additional sacred book, the Book of Jubilees. And it is among them, again, that those books arose which gave authority to the New Covenant. Having ruled out their fathers from the Covenant, they must date back their teachings to the forefathers and to the patriarchs and other Biblical personages. Certainly their Book of Jubilees, as well as their Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs, and their Book of Enoch, did not agree in all particulars with the texts which have come down to us. The Book of Jubilees, for instance, must have contained more Halacha than it contains at present. Nor can all these passages, either in the Book of Jubilees or in the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs favourable to Judah have formed a part of the original works as known to the founders of the Sect. All such passages are probably a later addition by succeeding generations, who must have entirely recast the contents of the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs. But through whatever changes and interpolation this class of Pseudepigrapha may have passed—and certain of them may have been undertaken with the purpose of reconciling their teachings with those of the nation at large—their sectarian character always remained prominent, especially in their Halachic parts. Naturally all this class of Pseudepigrapha is of supreme importance for the history of Christianity, which undoubtedly was the consummation of all sectarian endeavour preceding it, and must have absorbed all the hostile elements arrayed against official Judaism; but for this very reason it cannot be considered as a factor in the development of Pharisaic Judaism. Altogether, I have the feeling that the "higher theology" is a little too hasty in its reconstruction of Pharisaic Judaism, relying too much on a few isolated Hagadic passages which in one way or another crept into Rabbinic literature, and entirely ignoring the Halacha. Lagarde somewhere makes the remark that the treatment of the Pentateuch must never be approached without a thorough knowledge of the Halacha, either in questions bearing upon higher criticism or in those touching upon textual criticism. How much more is this the case with Pharisaism. The only authoritative source for it is and will always remain the Talmud, and the "great Midrashim," in their Hagadic and not less in their Halachic parts.

we should read ופרוש. Meaning not quite clear to me.

¶ IV

<sup>1</sup> Heb. l. 1 ומשפחותיהם probably suggested by Gen.
10 32 בני נח. But the reading is doubtful, the MS. being torn and the letters in brackets missing.
The sin to which he refers is perhaps the eating of blood (cf. Jub. 6 18 and below, l. 6), assuming that some sentence is missing in which reference to this sin was made. It is also possible that the בה at the beginning of this paragraph (p. 3, l. 1 "in it") is a corruption of ברם.
Of course, תעי, the second word in this line is a mere clerical error for תעו.

<sup>2</sup> Heb. ibid. בה הם נכרתים. Cf. Lev. 7 27;
Jub. 6 12; that is, liable to the punishment of כרת.

<sup>3</sup> "Became friend" Heb. l. 2 ויעשה אוהב which reading however is very doubtful as indicated by the brackets. Cf. Jub. 19 9, and N.T. James 2 23.

refrain from eating blood. See also Jub. 6 19.

 8 unto the voice of their Maker<sup>13</sup>, the commandments of their teachers<sup>14</sup>, and murmured
 9 in their tents<sup>15</sup>. Therefore the wrath of God was kindled | against their congregation<sup>16</sup>, and their children perished by it, and their kings were exterminated by it, and their
 10 mighty men perished by it | and their land *was made desolate*<sup>17</sup> by* it. By it
 11 were guilty<sup>15</sup> the first that entered into the covenant, and they were delivered | unto

¶ V 13 But with them that held fast to<sup>1</sup> the commandments of God, | who were left among
 14 them, God confirmed His covenant with Israel for ever, revealing | unto them the hidden things in which all Israel erred: His holy Sabbaths and His glorious 15 festivals, | the testimony of His righteousness and the ways of His truth and the
 16 desires of His will which a man shall do | and live by them<sup>2</sup>. He opened before
 17 them<sup>3</sup> and they digged a well of many waters, | and he that despises them shall not live<sup>4</sup>. But they *wallowed<sup>5</sup> in the transgression of man<sup>6</sup> and in the ways of 18 the unclean woman. | And they said that it belongs to us<sup>7</sup>. But God in the *abundance<sup>8</sup> of His wonder made atonement for their sins<sup>9</sup> and forgave their trans-
 19 gression. | And He built them a sure house in Israel<sup>10</sup>, the like of which never arose
 20 beforetime and | hitherto. They who hold fast to Him are for the life of eternity,
 21 and all glory of man is for them; as | God confirmed it to them through Ezekiel,

<sup>11</sup> The Heb. text (ll. 6 and 7 ויכרת...ורטנו את 7) is very corrupt. But the parallel passages in Num. 14 29, 43; Deut. 1 40—46, 9 23, 24 and Ps. 106 33 suggest the following correction ויכרת זכורם וכאשר דבר להם במרבר קדש עלו ורשואת הארץ after which our translation was made.

<sup>12</sup> Heb. l. 7 רוחם ולא etc. which gives no sense, but the references given in the former note suggest וימרו את רוחו. It is also possible that the missing words are ויבהרו ברצון רוחם "and chose the will of their own spirit." Cf. above, ll. 2 and 3.

Cf. below, Heb. p. 6, l. 18 and p. 20, ll. 30 and 31. Perhaps it refers to certain laws regarding the observance of the Sabbath. Cf. Singer, pp. 191 and 198. See Introduction, pp. xvi and xviii.

<sup>3</sup> Heb. l. 16 פ' לפניהם. Perhaps corruption of הפ' עיניהם "He opened their eyes." Cf. 2 Kings 6 20 etc.

11 end in accordance with the number of these years | *one shall not join the house of
12 Judah<sup>11</sup>, but every man shall stand up against his | net<sup>12</sup>. The wall is built, the decree
13 is far removed<sup>13</sup>. And during all these years there will be | Belial<sup>14</sup> let loose against Israel
14 as God hath spoken through Isaiah, the prophet, the son | of Amoz, saying: Fear and the net and the snare are upon thee, O inhabitant of the land<sup>15</sup>. Its explanation
15-16 is<sup>16</sup>: three nets of Belial concerning which Levi the son of Jacob hath spoken<sup>17</sup> | by *
17 which he ensnared Israel<sup>18</sup> and *directed their faces to the three kinds | of righteousness.

את משמרת מקדשי בתעות בני ישראל מעלי המה יקרו
אלי לשרתני ועמדו לפני להקריב לי חלב ודם נאם אדני ה'
Our Heb. l. 21 and p. 4, ll. 1, 2 text reproduced by the translation reads ובני צדוק אשר שִׁמְרוּ
את משמרת מקדשי בתעות בני ישראל מעליהם יגישו לי חלב ודם. The differences are striking and some of these may be ascribed to the carelessness of the scribe, but it is not impossible that the differences in the first three words were made intentionally to indicate that his priests and Levites were not identical with the sons of Zadok. This is at least the impression one receives from the comment given in the lines that follow.

¶ VI

<sup>1</sup> Heb. l. 2 שְׁבִי. Cf. Heb. p. 6, l. 5; p. 8, l. 16 (text B, l. 29) which word I read שְׁכִי "captivity." The word, however, can also be read שְׁבִי "repentants." Cf.
p. 19, ll. 15, 16. But p. 6, l. 5, connecting the שְׁבִי with the immigration from the land of Judah, speaks in favour of "captivity."

<sup>2</sup> Heb. l. 3 והנלוים עמהם representing the לויים of Ezekiel.

<sup>4</sup> Cf. Gen. 49 1, Dan. 10 14 etc.

<sup>5</sup> Heb. l. 6 התנודרם. It may also mean wanderings.
Cf. above, Heb. p. 2, ll. 9-12. As above reference is contained here to the history of the sect, the names of its leaders, the sufferings during their wanderings before they settled and their various activities. But unfortunately all these details were omitted by the scribe.

<sup>6</sup> Heb. ll. 9, 10 בערם שונוים הקודש of which I give a literal translation, but it renders no sense. The text is evidently corrupt and before the הקודש some words are evidently missing. It is, however, possible, that we should emend הקודש שונוים into הראשונים. Cf.
below, ll. 9, 10, though even with this emendation the sense is not quite clear. Another possibility is that the המקדש שונוים is a corruption of שונוים, "they keep the charge of the sanctuary," which is one of the functions of the sons of Zadok.

<sup>7</sup> See above, Heb. p. 1, l. 19.

<sup>8</sup> Heb. התוסרו used by this writer in the sense of instruction. Cf. Heb. p. 7, l. 5. See also Heb. Dict.
See, however, p. 20, l. 31, which probably means "were chastised."

<sup>9</sup> Heb. l. 8 שלים corruption of שלום, cf. below, l. 10.

<sup>10</sup> The meaning of these last two sentences is entirely obscure. All we can see is that he contrasts his congregation with its priests, its Levites and the sons of Zadok with the wicked men who followed the איש הלצון (Heb. p. 1, l. 14) who are further accused of having justified the wicked and condemned the righteous (Heb.
p. 1, l. 19). They are not entirely free from sin but they are redeemed by the fact that they follow the explanation of the Law as was understood by the forefathers (ראשונים), that is Noah and the Patriarchs (in the Book of Jubilees). Hence they obtain pardon, as their forefathers did.

<sup>13</sup> See paraphrase of Micah 7 11 but the application is not clear to me.

<sup>16</sup> Reading Heb. l. 14. Heb. פִּירָה, meaning as much as פִּירָה. Cf. Heb. and Rab. Dictionaries, s. פִּירָה.

<sup>17</sup> Heb. l. 15 אשר עליהם אמר לוי בן יעקב. Perhaps some words are missing here. In any case we have here a distinct reference to the Testament of Levi, see below note 18.

<sup>18</sup> Heb. ibid. l. 16 אשר הוא תפיש בהם בישראל taking the הוא to refer to בליעל. Cf. Jub. 1 20. It is however

18 The first is fornication, the second is *wealth<sup>10</sup>, the third | is the *pollution of the sanctuary<sup>20</sup>. He that fleeth from this will be ensnared by that, and he that escapeth possible that the author was thinking of Ezek. 14 4, 5 ומכשול עונו ישים נדר פניו... למען תפיש את בית ישראל בלבם. To place before man the "stumbling-blocks of his iniquities" is thus a means of leading him back to righteousness. הוא would thus refer to Levi and תפיש would mean by which he (Levi) "took" Israel (in their hearts).

<sup>19</sup> Reading I Heb. l. 17 הון instead of הין. Cf. Heb. p. 6, l. 15 and p. 8, l. 5. See Jub. 23 21.

<sup>20</sup> Heb. p. 4, l. 10. Reading Heb. l. 18 טמאת המ' instead of טמא. Some sort of a parallel may be found to this passage in Test. Levi, 14 5—8, cf. ibid. 9 9 (see also p. 229) and Jub. 30 15, though the parallel is neither complete nor distinct enough. But it is possible that our author had a more complete text. See also Jub. 7. 21 text and notes with reference regarding the "three things" "owing" to which "the deluge came upon the earth": fornication, uncleanness (= טומאה?) and iniquity (זל or חמס).

<sup>22</sup> Heb. l. 19 בוני החוץ before which expression, some words must be missing. חוץ is a corruption of חוץ cf. Ezek. 13 10. The writer also probably thought of Lam. 2 14. We have here as well as below, p. 8, l. 12, an attack on Pharisees whom he derides as fence or wall builders to protect the law whilst in truth they are the worst offenders. Possibly this denunciation is in some way connected with the accusation of Test. Levi, 14 4, "teaching commandments contrary to the will of God."

an explanation of טומאה whilst the explanation of הון is apparently missing, being given only in general terms on p. 6, l. 15, seq.

<sup>3</sup> Heb. l. 21 בהייהם. The argument is evidently not only directed against polygamy, but also against divorce which certain Jewish sects forbade. Bachrach, in his Yoreach Lemoadim, p. 49a, perceives in the wording of Jub. 3 7 (see text and notes about the versions), also a prohibition against divorce, which, however, is questionable. See also Introduction, pp. xvii and xix.

<sup>5</sup> Gen. 1 27, cf. Matt. 21 3. Aboth d'R. Nathan p. 5a uses the same argument of Adam against polygamy but does not give the verse.

<sup>11</sup> Reading Heb. ll. 4, 5 ויטמון נגלה instead of ויטמון נגלה. Another possibility is that נגלה is a corruption of מנלה and is here = ספר. To which Zadok reference is made here is difficult to say. It must in any case be a Biblical personage. See Introduction, p. xxi.

<sup>12</sup> Heb. l. 5 ויעלו, which I take to be a corruption of ויעלימו.

<sup>27</sup> That is to say, that in case of compulsion, he is exempt from punishment. Heb. ibid. כי אם נלחץ. I hardly need repeat here that the explanation of such corrupt texts is merely tentative.

<sup>28</sup> The Heb. equivalent Ibid. למילפנים (מלפנים l. 17) is preceded by the words כי אם which I omitted as a mere dittography.

<sup>32</sup> Heb. l. 17 עמר. Possibly it is a corruption of עזר "helped." The connection of the following lines with the preceding is not clear to me.

<sup>33</sup> Heb. l. 18 ישר האורים. Perhaps it is a corruption of ישר הפנים "the prince of the Presence" who helped Moses against the devices of Belial (or Mastema), cf. Jub. 48 2 and 9. Cf. especially ibid. v. 4, "And I delivered thee out of his (Mastema's) hand"; the deliverer, apparently, is the angel of the Presence, who dictates to Moses the contents of the Book of Jubilees. See Jub. 1 27; 2 1.

<sup>35</sup> The brother is Mamre. We have evidently here a reference to the well-known Jannes and Jambries legend. See the literature in Schürer, Geschichte des Jüdischen Volkes, III., 1898, pp. 292—294. Cf. also Realencyklopädie für protestantische Theologie und Kirche, 3rd edition, Vol. VIII., p. 587.

<sup>11</sup> Heb. ll. 6, 7 ולא הושבה פאתם בפי אחד, of which the last twelve words are a literal translation but give no sense. Perhaps we should read ו' השברה פ' בפרי אחד. Cf. Ezek. 31 12. The meaning would be that their searching in or interpreting of the Law had not the effect of breaking the bough by a single fruit, that is did not result in any heresy. Cf. the Rabbinic phrase קצין בנטיעות and see Rab. Dict. s. נטיעה and s. קצין.

<sup>13</sup> Heb. l. 9 בחוקקות = חוקים. More probable is that we had here במשענות כאשר. Cf. Num. 21 18.

<sup>14</sup> Reading in Heb. l. 10 בהם for במה. This word can also be read במה.

<sup>15</sup> Heb. ibid. בכל קין הרשע. The last word I took to be a corruption of הרשע. Cf. Ezek. 21 30. Cf. below, Heb. p. 12, l. 23; 15, l. 7 and p. 20, l. 23. It seems that sometimes the term means as much as the beginning of repentance, but in other places it has to be taken as meaning till the end of the wickedness in general preceding the advent of the Teacher of Righteousness.

<sup>16</sup> Heb. ibid. וזולתם that is any new things not included in בהם as dictated by the Lawgiver shall not be reached before the end of the days. Cf. also Prov. 2 19. <sup>21</sup> Heb. l. 30 העירו. Perhaps the writer took it from העירו "to gather after," but which can also be read העירו. The על gives no meaning in either way. Possibly העירו is right, in which case we should have to translate the passage, "who bore witness against the people (and) for God."

TEXT A

19 this judgment | it will be for everyone who despises the commandments of God, and He forsook them and they turned away in the stubbornness of their heart. | This is the word which Jeremiah has spoken to Baruch the son of
20 Neriah, and Elisha | to his servant Gehazi. All the men who entered into the New Covenant in the land of Damascus<sup>52</sup>.

walk after them. And like unto this judgment it will be for every one who despises the commandments of God, | and He forsook them and they 33 turned away in the stubbornness of their heart. So are all the men who entered in to the New Covenant | in the land of Damascus but they turned 34 *and committed treason and turned away from the spring of living waters. | * 'They * shall not* 35 *be<sup>22</sup> counted in the assembly of people, and in its writing<sup>23</sup> * they shall not be written.'* From the day when there was gathered in<sup>24</sup> || the only || Page 20 teacher until there will arise the Anointed from Aaron and from Israel<sup>25</sup>. And this is also the Law | for all that entered into the congregation of men 2 of perfection of holiness<sup>26</sup>, but he will * cease<sup>27</sup> accomplishing the statutes that are upright. | He 3 is the man who is melted in the furnace. When his deeds will appear<sup>28</sup> he shall be expelled from the congregation | as though his lot had not 4 fallen among them that are taught by God<sup>29</sup>. According to his treason they shall record him<sup>30</sup> * with the men | of * perversion<sup>31</sup> until he will 5 come back to stay in the station of the men of perfect holiness. | And when his deeds shall 6 appear according to the interpretation of the Law in which walk | the men of perfection of 7 holiness, no man shall * profit<sup>32</sup> him in wealth and labour, | for the saints of the Most High have 8 cursed him. And like this judgment shall be to everyone who despises both among them who

<sup>24</sup> Heb. ibid. האסף meaning "died." This word is followed by יור and מורה which are both cancelled.

<sup>27</sup> Heb. ibid. יקיץ which I took as coming from קציץ. It may of course be derived from קיין "to abhor," "to despise," but the first seems to me to be more probable.

<sup>32</sup> Heb. l. 7 יאות. See Heb. and Rab. Dict. s. אאות. Here it means probably to "associate."

were before | and among them who came after<sup>33</sup>, 9 who placed idols upon their hearts and walked in the stubbornness | of their hearts. They have 10 no share in the house of the Law. Like the judgment of their neighbours who returned | with 11 the men of scoffing<sup>34</sup> they shall be judged. For they uttered error against the statutes of righteousness and despised | the covenant and the 12 pledge of faith which they have affirmed in the land of Damascus; and this is the New Covenant<sup>35</sup>. |
 And there shall not be unto them or unto their 13 families a share in the house of the Law. And from the day | when there was gathered in the 14 only teacher<sup>36</sup> until all the men of the war were

 be kindled | the wrath of God against Israel as 16
 He said, 'There is no King, and no prince<sup>38</sup>,' salvation and righteousness for them who fear<sup>43</sup>

 the righteous | and wicked, between them that 21 served Him<sup>44</sup> and them that served Him not."

<sup>33</sup> Heb. ll. 8, 9 לכל המאם בראשונים ובאחרונים. The meaning is not quite clear whether the despiser is one of the בראשונים etc. or the ראשונים etc. were the object of his contempt.

<sup>39</sup> This quotation כאשר אמר וכי (Heb. ll. 15, 16) must rest on some confusion by the scribe of Biblical verses such as Isa. 11 4 and Hosea 3 4.

<sup>40</sup> After the word פשע Heb. l. 15 we have a trace of a י which may have been the beginning of יעקב. Cf. Is. 59 21 (ביעקב).

<sup>43</sup> Heb. ibid. ושבתם וראיתם, etc. The largest part of this line is faded, but the reading as given in the text is fairly certain. Cf. Mal. 3 18.

<sup>1</sup> Heb. l. 1 יהרים אדם מאדם. The מאדם I took to be a dittography. The expression was probably suggested by Lev. 27 29 כל חרם אשר יהרם מן האדם.

<sup>2</sup> Heb. ibid. להמית that is according to the laws of the נויים. I take this law to contain a prohibition against acknowledging the jurisdiction of the gentiles (ערכאות נויים) which is also forbidden by Rabbinic law. Cf. Maimonides, Mishneh Torah, Hilkoth Sanhedrin, ch. 26, § 7, text and reference given by the commentators.

<sup>7</sup> Heb. ibid. בהוכח. Cf. below, l. 18. Cf. Test. Gad, 4 2, 5, to which our text seems to be a partial parallel.

<sup>8</sup> Heb. l. 4 ויהביאו, corruption of ויהבהו.

<sup>11</sup> Heb. l. 6 בדבר מות meaning perhaps that he accuses him of a capital offence. It is however possible we should read here אמת for מות, that is even if it be true.

<sup>14</sup> See 1 Sam. 25 26 and 31, where the הושע ירך לך is considered an act of violence amounting to bloodshed. Cf. Baba Kama, 27 b, and Tur, Choshen Mishpath, S 4, where the principle of אינש דינא לנפשיה.

<sup>16</sup> Reading Heb. l. 10 לפני instead of לפנים.

 its owners were not found they shall keep it in trust. If a man acts treacherously |
 17 against any law and his neighbour sees it and he is only one—if it be a charge of
 18 death he shall make it known* | in his presence to the Censor, proving<sup>25</sup> it to him.
 19 And the Censor shall write it down with his hand; until he will do it | again before

<sup>27</sup> Heb. l. 21 דבר אחר, in contradistinction of דבר מות (?). The meaning of this law and the one that follows is not clear to me. It would seem as if in the case of death our Text insists upon three witnesses, whilst in other cases, punished only by the exclusion from the טהרה, two witnesses are sufficient; whilst the words, "and through one witness to exclude from the Purity," in l. 23, perhaps refer back to the case of death, that the evidence even of one witness has the result of exclusion from the Purity.

<sup>29</sup> Heb. l. 22 ועל החוק. The latter word I first read ההון by mistake. The MS. is faded and the middle of the next word is partly torn away, only a ך being visible at the beginning. The remaining letters are כלו. I can only suggest that it is a remainder of יקבלו "they shall accept," but there is no trace of the leg of the Kof.

<sup>32</sup> That is, who have not reached the age of twenty-five. Cf. Exod. 30 13 and 14. Cf. below, l. 6.

¶ XI

<sup>3</sup> Heb. l. 5 ברורים. Cf. Jer. Kiddushin, 66a, דברורין שבאחין with reference to the appointment of officers.

<sup>4</sup> Heb. l. 5 העת. It may also mean "for the time being."

<sup>5</sup> Heb. l. 6 בספר ההנו. Cf. Ps. 49 4 והנות, "meditation." What is understood by this הנו, whether a special book of the sect or the regular Scriptures I am unable to say.

<sup>6</sup> Cf. Num. 8 24 and Lev. 27 7.

God* was kindled<sup>8</sup> against the inhabitants of the earth, he said to remove<sup>9</sup> their |

 18 day of the Sabbath no man shall utter a word | of *folly<sup>4</sup>. And surely none shall demand any debt of his neighbour<sup>5</sup>. None shall judge on matters of property, and gain<sup>6</sup>. |
 19 None shall speak on matters of work and labour to be done on the following morning<sup>7</sup>. |
 20-21 No man shall walk in the field to do the work of *his affairs<sup>8</sup> | on *the day<sup>9</sup> of the

<sup>2</sup> Heb. ibid. מרעיל which I took as a corruption of מטביל. Cf. Erubin 4b, and reference given there, שכל נופו עולה בהן.

<sup>3</sup> Reading Heb. l. 12 במי for במה. This law seems to be directed against מים שאובים "drawn water," which also according to the Rabbinic law is unfit for immersion. Cf. Maimonides, Hilcoth Mikwa'oth, ch. 4, § 3.

¶ XIII

<sup>3</sup> Deut. 5 12. Perhaps it is the word שמוך which is urged deriving from it what is known in Rabbinic literature as תוספת, that is the time added to a holy day before it actually begins. See Rosh Hashauah, 9a and cf. Rabb. Dict. s. תוספת. See Hadasi, Alphabeta, and Gan Eden by the Karaite, Aaron the Elder, 37a, and Bashiatsi, p. 40 seq., and 45d.

<sup>4</sup> Heb. ll. 17, 18 רבר נבל meaning probably the same as רברי חול, that is matters of a secular nature which must not be discussed on the Sabbath. The Rabbis derive this prohibition from Isa. 58 13. Cf. Shabbath, 150a. See also Maimonides, Mishneh Torah, Hilchoth Shabbath, ch. 24.

<sup>8</sup> Reading Heb. l. 20 חפציו or חפציו. This probably only means to plan the work for the following day. Cf. the references given in note 4.

<sup>10</sup> Heb. ibid. על, but is preceded by a word looking somewhat like אר. Perhaps it is a corruption of אר, but it is more likely to be a mere clerical error, the scribe having first written by mistake אר, and correcting himself afterwards by the proper word על.

<sup>11</sup> Heb. l. 21 אלה. No such "Sabbath limit" however is known. Probably it is a mere clerical error for אלפים. Cf. Heb. p. 11, l. 6. See also Jub. 50 8, text and note.

<sup>12</sup> Heb. l. 22 המוכן, that is destined or prepared for this purpose from the eve of the Sabbath or the feast. Cf. Mishne Beza 1. 2. See also Rabb. Dict. s. כון. Cf. Jub. 50 9 and 2 29.

<sup>13</sup> "The field." Of the Heb. equivalent בשרה l. 23, only the ה is certain, whilst there is also a faint trace of the ד.

 ditch, he shall not raise it on the Sabbath<sup>34</sup>. No man shall *rest<sup>35</sup> in a place near | 15 to the gentiles on the day of the Sabbath. No man shall profane<sup>36</sup> the Sabbath for <sup>16</sup> The meaning of these laws is to be found in the interpretation of Exod. 16 29, Jub. 50 8 and 2 29. Cf. Singer, p. 199 and Charles' notes to Jub. ibid. Cf. also Hadasi, Alphabeta, 147.

<sup>18</sup> This law does not refer exactly to the Sabbath, but to all the days of the week on account of contamination (טומאה). See Introduction, p. xxv.

<sup>19</sup> Heb. l. 4 יתערב. Meaning obscure. Perhaps it is a corruption of ירעב, which would mean as much as to be hungry, or to starve oneself, thus containing a prohibition against fasting on the Sabbath. Possibly, it is a direct corruption of יתענה. Cf. Jub. 50 12.

<sup>22</sup> Reading Heb. l. 8 מובי for מובה. Cf. Rabb. Dict. s. מבוּי and מבוּא. About this law in general, cf. Jub. 2 29, 30 and 50 8.

<sup>24</sup> Reading Heb. l. 9 יפתח for פתח. Cf. Hadasi, Alphabeta, 148. The Rabbinic law is very mild in this respect. See Shabbath, 146 a, and Maimonides, Hilcoth Shabbath, ch. 23, § 2. See also Jost, III. p. 303.

<sup>25</sup> Heb. l. 10 סמנים, more correct סמנים. Cf. Rab. Dict. s. סמן and סממן. Cf. Mishneh, Shabbath vi. 6. Tosefta, ibid. v. 10 and T. B. Shabbath 65a where a similar law is to be found.

<sup>33</sup> See Mishneh, Shabbath xviii. 3 where we have such a law with regard to the festivals (יום טוב). Cf. Tur Orach Chayim, par. 339.

<sup>35</sup> Reading ibid. l. 14 יישבית for יישבות, that is, not to stay over the Sabbath in a gentile vicinity. Cf. Wreschner, pp. 14—15, for a similar law of the Samaritans and the Karaites.

<sup>36</sup> Heb. l. 15 יחל, perhaps a corruption of יחלל. Perhaps we have to understand by it the prohibition of buying and selling on the Sabbath. Cf. Jub. 50 8.

<sup>38</sup> Heb. l. 16 אל מים מקום מים ואל מקום מים. The first מים is cancelled in the MS. מקום is undoubtedly a corruption of מקוה, cf. Lev. 11 36, which emendation is reproduced in the translation. After the second מקום some word is missing.

<sup>39</sup> Assuming that Heb. l. 17 reads יַעֲלֶה, and thus refers to the נפש in the preceding line. For the Rabbinic law in this respect, see Yoma, 84b, and Maimonides, Hilcoth Shabbath, ch. 2, par. 7. It is more probable that some words are missing at the end of the preceding line, and that l. 17 is the beginning of a new law.

<sup>40</sup> Perhaps he is referring to Lev. 23 38 מלכר שבתוה 'ה interpreting it to mean "save the Sabbath of the Lord" on which the burnt offering and the meat offering etc. recorded in the preceding verse are forbidden. Of course the correct translation is "beside the Sabbaths of the Lord." More probable it is that we have here a reference to Jub. 50 10, "and rest thereon from all labour.....save burning frankincense and bringing oblations and sacrifices .....for Sabbaths," which the scribe in some way confused with the preceding law and wrote אל יעל, instead of אל ייש and then omitted several words which might easily be supplied from Jub.

<sup>3</sup> Prov. 15 8, but the second clause of the verse reads there ותפלת ישרים רצונו "The prayer of the upright is his delight." The reading ותפלת צדקם כמנחת רצון as our text has it (Heb. II. 20, 21) is undoubtedly corrupt and points to a confusion with Prov. 15 29.

<sup>4</sup> Heb. l. 22 בית השתחות lit. the house of prostration, cf. the Arabic مسجد. Cf. Levy's Wörterbuch über die Targumim II. 141 about בית סנידו and בית סנודהו, but it is never applied to a Jewish place of worship. The term is strongly suggestive of the Falashas' Mesgeed.

<sup>5</sup> Supplying ibid. after טמא the word בלי or בלא, cf. above l. 4. But it is also possible that it means as much as a טמא who is in need of כבוש. Cf. Lev. 11 14 and 15 10. See also 2 Chron. 23 19.

<sup>6</sup> Heb. l. 23 יתאחר או יתקדם which may also mean be it earlier or later.

<sup>7</sup> Heb. ibid. הַשַּׁבָּת but only the ת is traceable whilst the other letters are torn off. The meaning of the law is entirely obscure to me.

<sup>13</sup> The meaning of this law is that he is only permitted to kill a gentile when it is a case of self-protection.

<sup>16</sup> That is to their idols. Some similar laws are to be found in Mishneh, Aboda Zarah I. 8, and 9. Cf. also the Gemara to these Mishnas.

<sup>17</sup> Heb. l. 10 בכל מאדו. Perhaps we should read מאדום "for all their property" that is for any money. See Rab. Dict. s. מאד.

<sup>20</sup> Heb. l. 12 לאכל מהם מעגלי הדבורים. The מהם is probably a mere clerical error, whilst the מעגלי הדבורים means as much as the Rabbinic כוורת דבורים, cf. Jastrow s. כוורת. I do not remember any sect that forbade honey, though there was the consideration that it comes from an unclean insect, cf. Bechoroth 7 b. Perhaps it refers to particles of the bees which are mixed up with the honey. Rabbinic Judaism had no scruples in this respect and allowed the honey as it came from the bee-hives (see Shulchan Aruch, Joreh Deah § 81), whilst the Karaites protested and insisted on a preparation of the honey (through filtering) so as to separate these particles. Cf. Salmon b. Jerucham's denunciation of this less stringent usage of the Rabbanites ועד מזובים ועד יתושים ודבורים היתרו לבלע בחורים ואמרו לא זה משרצי אדמה בדבורים ושכחו השרץ השרוף ואחור. נסונים וסרים. (MS). Cf. Eshkol Hakkofer Alphabetica, 236. See however, Introduction, p. xxiv.

<sup>21</sup> Heb. l. 12 ער. It is not impossible that this is a shortened quotation from Lev. 11 43—46 which began להכתוב אל (v. 43) to v. 46.

<sup>23</sup> Reading and supplying Heb. l. 14 ונישפך דמם. The ונישפך is almost certain though the פ is torn off whilst there are also definite traces of the דמם. This agrees in part with the view of the older Karaites and Samaritans, who forbade the eating of fish that died in the water or were found dead on the shore. Cf. Wreschner, p. 51. The splitting of the fish had, according to this writer, to be done by one of the Sect, as the אסיפה, according to some Samaritans and Karaites, had to be done by a Jew. Emphasis has also to be put on the ונישפך דמם. The law is directed against the Rabbinic opinion permitting the eating of the blood of fish. See Sifra 39 a and Kerithoth 20 b.

<sup>24</sup> See Wreschner ibid. p. 52, about the mode of killing the locusts in water. As to meaning of the last words, "for this is the manner of their creation." See Chullin, 27 b, where we have a homily to the effect that cattle have to be killed in a certain way because they were created out of the dry land (earth); fish, again, require no killing, being created out of the water; whilst birds, which were created out of alluvial mud (a combination of water and earth) occupy also, with regard to their ritual killing, a middle place between cattle and fish. The notion was thus that the mode of killing is in some way connected with the element out of which the animal in question was created. We may thus assume that in the composition of the locust, according to our author, the elements of water and fire are to be found, hence they shall be killed by water or by fire. According to the Rabbinic law, the locust requires no killing at all. See Maimonides, Mishneh Torah, Hilchoth Shechitah, ch. i. 1, and Tur Joreh Deah, § 13.

<sup>25</sup> Reading Heb. l. 16 כמותם כמוהם for יגואלו שמו in referring to the האדם האדם. The י of the שמו may also be taken as a final י.

<sup>27</sup> Heb. l. 18 כלי מעיטה. Cf. Num. 31 51. Both this law and the one preceding it are in contradiction to the Rabbinic law, exempting all these things from טומאה. Cf. Mishneh Kelim XII. 3 and Maimonides, Hilchoth Kelim, ch. x. 1.

<sup>10</sup> The MS. is both faded and torn in this place. The .. תהל which is taken as קהל in the translation is very doubtful. Before בקין traces of לה may be seen.

<sup>11</sup> Reading Heb. p. 12, l. 23, and p. 13, l. 1, מֵאַהֲרֹן וּיִשְׂרָאֵל מִשּׁוֹחַ מֵאַהֲרֹן וּמִיִּשְׂרָאֵל. Cf. Heb. p. 19, ll. 10, 11, and p. 20, l. 1, text and notes. In my first reading of the MS., I assumed that there is a lacuna in the MS. between p. 12 and p. 13, as indicated by the asterisks at the bottom of p. 12. But further study convinced me of the continuity of the text, as it proceeds on p. 13, to give interpreting details to the סֵרֵךְ מוֹשֵׁב on p. 12, remaining in force till the advent of the Messiah. Cf. p. 6, l. 10, which is an exact parallel, only that there he calls the "Messiah," the Teacher of Righteousness, l. 11.

<sup>22</sup> Reading Heb. l. 6 פשה instead of פתי. But it is also possible that פתי (fool, ignorant) is correct. The meaning would be that even in the case when the priest is an ignorant man and has to be instructed by the Censor, the act of shutting up the leper had to be done by the priest. Cf. Sifra, 60b, and Mishneh Negaim 111. 1, for a similar law.

<sup>4</sup> The MS. is torn and probably also corrupt in this place. The translation assumes the reading and emendation in Heb. l. 9 וישא לכל מרדותם (for מרחובם).

<sup>6</sup> See Isa. 58 7 which suggests the emendation of רשעותיהם (wickedness) instead of קשריהם in Heb. l. 10.

<sup>7</sup> The MS. is torn in this line (10) as indicated by the dots. The traces left suggest also some such words למתי זדים, or לעתי ז'.

<sup>11</sup> Heb. l. 12 יהותו which I took to be a corruption from יצאו. See above, l. 4. It is also possible that the word is a corruption of יהוסו "genealogy," "pedigree." Cf. Rab. Dict. s. יהוס.

<sup>15</sup> Heb. l. 14 אל ברית אל אל. I took the second אל to be a mere dittography. Cf. above, Heb. p. 2, l. 2, and elsewhere. This is followed by אל ישאל, but the trace of the ל is very uncertain, and on closer examination I found it to be a ו, thus reading אל ישא ואל יתן meaning "to deal," "to have money transactions." Cf. Rab. Dict. s. נשא.

<sup>16</sup> Heb. l. 14 בני השחר which gives no meaning, and which I emended הנבר ב'. Cf. above, Heb. p. 11, l. 2. Before the בני some short word is torn off which may have been את or עם. After הישחר is also room for another short word, probably כי.

<sup>17</sup> Heb. l. 15 כף לבף. See Prov. 16 5 יר ליר. Cf. also Epstein, pp. 68, 74, note 5. The תקיעת כף is one of the various ways of affirming a money transaction. Yet the meaning remains unclear to me.

<sup>23</sup> Heb. l. 18 ענוהו, the reading of which is very doubtful, most of this line being torn off, and what remains is very faded. After the word ובאהבת we have the letters הט.

<sup>24</sup> Heb. ibid. יטה, reading uncertain; and so is the following ..הב.. which may perhaps also be taken as בהם or יהם..

<sup>30</sup> At the end of the line we have the letters ונע (which are certain), followed by traces of letters, the first of which may be a נ, but also perhaps פ. Perhaps we have here some corrupt quotation from Mal. 3 1 ופנה...פתאים 3

<sup>10</sup> Heb. l. 9 בעול which I read בעול. According to this the sect would insist upon the marriage of the מבקר as the Rabbis did with regard to the high priest. Possibly it is a mere dittography of the following בכל. It is also possible that it is a corruption of בא. It would then be connected with the בסוד אנשים of the next line, "coming into every assembly of men." Cf. Gen. 49 6.

<sup>11</sup> The MS. is here torn and only the letters reproduced in the text remain. The ר of רמ has the Babylonian vowel ר.

<sup>15</sup> Heb. l. 22 במשה which however is uncertain as it may also be read במשפט. There were also on this line traces of ישף. Line 23 is entirely missing.

¶ XVIII

<sup>2</sup> Heb. l. 12 תרומתן הם. But the reading is very doubtful, and the faded letters look also like שני ימים "two days." It would then perhaps mean that the earnings of two days in every month should be set apart for certain communal purposes.

<sup>3</sup> The MS. has here ט...המ as reproduced in the Heb. text, ibid. the middle letters being torn off. המשפט ("the law," "rule") is the word which suggests itself.

<sup>4</sup> The MS. is torn and faded in this place as indicated in the Heb. text, l. 14 עם...בעד which may perhaps be corrected into בעד עניים. It may also be a corruption of בהנים (priests).

<sup>5</sup> Heb. ibid. מני; but there are also traces of a מ after the י. I thus read וממני for ומני.

<sup>7</sup> The MS. is mutilated here. I first read ינע, as reproduced in Heb. l. 15, but on closer examination I find that it may be read ינוע "who is wandering," that is, homeless.

¶ XIX

<sup>1</sup> Here perhaps some leaf or leaves are missing in the MS. The first word of this page (Heb. p. 15, l. 1) is faded and the last letter is discernible ע which suggests שבע "he shall take an oath."

<sup>2</sup> Heb. l. 1 ונם באלף ולמר ונם באלף ורלת. That is אל of אלהים and ארני of אר. Cf. Mishneh, Shebuoth IV. 13 באלה דל"ח...מישביע אני עליכם. Cf. also T. B. Shebuoth 35a and Masecheth Soferin, ed. Joel Müller, pp. vii and 58.

<sup>3</sup> Reading and supplying with fair certainty, Heb. ibid. שבועת הכוריתו. The line probably finished with או "or the curses," etc. Even in its present defective state what remains of the text allows us to assume that we have here a law that one shall take no oath either by the full name (the Tetragrammaton) or by any other name of God, such as Elohim or Adonai. The Samaritans, according to the well-known statement in Jer. Sanhedrin, 28b, were in the habit of taking the oath by the Tetragrammaton. Cf. Kirchheim, Karme Shomron, p. 26. Our Sect only allowed the oath by the covenant.

<sup>4</sup> Does this mean to swear by the Law? Cf. Shebuoth 38b שבועה בספר תורה; but there it does not mean to swear by the Law but to keep the scroll.

3 he shall not mention<sup>5</sup>, for<sup>6</sup>... | And if he swears and transgresses he will profane the
 4 Name<sup>7</sup>. And if by the curses of the Covenant..... | the Judges. And if he trans-
 5 gressed he is guilty and he shall confess and shall return and shall not bear... | <sup>8</sup>death.
 And he who enters into the covenant for the whole of Israel a statute for ever
 6 with their children *that<sup>9</sup>... | to pass among them that are numbered<sup>10</sup> by the oath of
 7 the covenant they shall confirm it upon them. And this is also | the law in every end of the wickedness<sup>11</sup>, for everyone who returns from his corrupt way. On the
 8 day of his speaking | with the Censor of the many they shall count him by the oath
 9 of the covenant that Moses established | with Israel. The covenant<sup>12</sup>..... *Moses
 10 with all heart<sup>13</sup>... | soul everything be found to be done in them<sup>14</sup>.... And no man

 13 return to the Law of Moses with all his heart and all his soul | .....of him if<sup>18</sup>.....
 and everything which was revealed of the Law with regard to a controversy<sup>19</sup>..... |
 14-15 .....in him<sup>20</sup>.....the Censor him and shall command him..... | until<sup>21</sup>.....*killed
 16-17 him<sup>22</sup>.....and the madman and all..... | till..... | *daughter<sup>23</sup>..... |
 ¶ Page 16 ..... || covenant with you and with the whole of Israel. Therefore
 2 the man shall confirm it upon *himself<sup>24</sup> to return to | the Law of Moses for in it everything is *exactly explained<sup>25</sup>.

¶ XX 3 As to the explanation of their ends<sup>1</sup> *for a remembrance<sup>2</sup> | to Israel of all these, behold, it is exactly explained in the Book of the Divisions of the Seasons<sup>3</sup> |

<sup>6</sup> After ב" for" the MS. is badly faded, but traces of letters ה, -ה, -ה, מפ"י, but everything must be considered as very uncertain.

<sup>7</sup> Heb. l. 3 וחלל השם that is by his transgressing the oath he is profaning the Name. Cf. Lev. 19 12. At the end of the line probably the words יבוא לפני are missing.

<sup>8</sup> Probably some such word as עון is to be supplied here. Cf. Lev. 17 16. This law as given in the text seems to be a corrupt condensation of Lev. 5 4, 5 and 23.

<sup>9</sup> Heb. l. 5 אשר though very little trace remains of the ך. Traces of letters indicated by the dots look somewhat like ע.מ.י. Perhaps we had here יולדו.

<sup>10</sup> See Exod. 30 13. The meaning of the law seems to be that their children shall take an oath by the covenant when mustered in the congregation, that is at the age of thirty as above, Heb. p. 14, ll. 3 and 6.

<sup>11</sup> Heb. l. 7 קין הרשע ך, that is in the case of repentance. Cf. above, Heb. p. 6, ll. 10 and 14.

<sup>12</sup> Heb. l. 9 את הברית. These words are followed by לש suggesting לשמע "to obey." The ל that comes next may be the remainder of לתורה followed by מישה.

<sup>13</sup> Heb. l. 10 לב which is followed by the trace of a ך forming probably the remainder of ובכל. See below, l. 12.

<sup>14</sup> Heb. l. 10 במ which may be a corruption of בה "in it," that is, in the Torah. The MS. is torn in this place only traces of illegible letters remaining, of which nothing is decipherable except the ך.

<sup>17</sup> Heb. l. 17 יתפתה the reading of which however is very doubtful. The word looks somewhat like יתפוזר. The paper is torn in the middle of the word. Perhaps, it read יחפוש בו "he shall inquire into him," that is, into the novice or penitent.

<sup>18</sup> Heb. l. 13 אם. The ך following it is very doubtful. The left traces look also somewhat like י.נ or ים.

<sup>20</sup> Heb. l. 14 בו. The word is preceded by the trace of a ך and followed by traces of יו.

<sup>21</sup> Heb. l. 15 ער which I first took as בר. Then come some very faint traces of עמר or ימו or מימו.

<sup>22</sup> Heb. l. 16 המתו which is however very doubtful. The left traces may also read המתו or הממקו. All the remaining single letters are very doubtful.

<sup>23</sup> Heb. l. 17 בת, which is however very doubtful, whilst it might also be the ending of any number of words like שבת, etc. The last six lines are entirely missing.

¶ XX

4 according to their jubilees and their weeks. And on the day on which the man
 5 will confirm upon himself to return | to the Law of Moses the angel of Mastema<sup>4</sup>
 6 will turn away from behind him if he will fulfil his word. | Therefore Abraham was circumcised on the day of his knowing *it<sup>5</sup>. As to what He said, "that which is 7 gone out of thy lips | thou shalt keep<sup>6</sup>" to confirm, every oath of a bond<sup>7</sup> by which
 8 a man will confirm upon himself | to perform a commandment of the Law till the
 9 *price of death<sup>8</sup> he shall not redeem it<sup>9</sup>. Every thing which |...<sup>10</sup> a man upon himself<sup>11</sup>...
 10 .....till price of death he shall not confirm it<sup>12</sup>..... | the oath of the woman
 11 which *Moses said <sup>13</sup>to disallow her oath<sup>14</sup>. No man | shall disallow an oath which
 12 *no man knew*<sup>15</sup>. It is to be fulfilled. As to disallowing<sup>16</sup> | if it is to transgress the covenant *then he shall disallow it and not confirm it. And so is also the law for 13 her father. | As to the law of *offerings<sup>17</sup>, no man shall vow anything for the altar
 14 under compulsion<sup>18</sup>. Nor | shall the *priests<sup>19</sup> take anything from the Israelites<sup>20</sup>
 15 .....a man *dedicate the food<sup>21</sup>..... | this is what he said, "They hunt every man
 16 his brother with a net*<sup>22</sup>." Nor | shall devote.....of all.....his possession |
 17-19 holy.....shall be punished... | he who takes a vow..... | to the judge<sup>23</sup>.....

<sup>5</sup> Heb. l. 6 ביום דעתו, that is, the importance of this law and its inherent virtue consists in man's being saved from the power of Mastema and other demons. Cf. Jub. 15 26, 32.

<sup>6</sup> Deut. 23 24.

<sup>9</sup> Heb. ibid. אל יפרהו. Perhaps we should read יפרהו ("he shall not make it void") for יפרהו. See also below, note 11.

<sup>10</sup> There is before the איש Heb. l. 9 the trace of a ם which suggests יקים "confirm."

<sup>11</sup> Heb. ibid. נפשו, followed by a ל. Before the ער we have distinct traces of רה, but between the ל and the רה there is enough space to supply מן התורה לוסור to "turn away from the Law." We might now explain these laws in the following way. First, that a man is bound to keep his vow pledging him to a particular commandment of the Law, even at the risk of death, having no powers of annulling it; second, that a man is bound not to keep his vow even at the risk of his life, if this vow was intended to abolish a commandment of the Law. The second עד מהיר מות may be a mere ditto-graphy, coming from the preceding line.

<sup>12</sup> The missing word in this place at the beginning of Heb. l. 10 must have been על (Heb. p. 10, l. 14 etc.) or ברבר "as to."

<sup>13</sup> Supplying ibid. אמור מושה.

<sup>14</sup> See Num. 30 6, 8, 9.

<sup>15</sup> Heb. l. 11 supplying the dots לא יודע אדם, which however is very doubtful. There is a trace of a נ after the ץ of ירע.

<sup>16</sup> That is as to the concession which the Scriptures make to the father and to the husband, in this respect they refer only to cases where the vow involves a breach of the Law.

<sup>21</sup> Heb. ibid. יקדש איש מאכל. If we put ולא before it as suggested in the preceding note, then we should translate "nor shall a man devote."

<sup>22</sup> Corrected and restored Heb. ibid. after Micah 7 2, הם איש את אחיהו יצורו חרם. The meaning of the law is not clear to me.

<sup>23</sup> The last lines are entirely missing, whilst from the preceding four lines, only a few words remain.

CORRECTIONS TO THE HEBREW TEXT

TEXT A.

- Heb. p. 1, l. 2 ריב for ריב
- 4 שארית for שארית.
- 11 Blank equal to the space of one word between לבו and ויודע.
- 20 חוק for חוק.
- p. 2, l. 3 ותושייה may also be read ותושייה.
- 9 קציהם may also be read קציתם.
- 15 כאשר may perhaps be read באשר.
- 20 Supply after בשר the word אשר.
- p. 3, l. 1 ומשפחה, ומשפחה, the ת, however, is doubtful.
- 21 Omit interrogation mark after והלויים.
- p. 4, l. 17 Blank equal to the space of a short word after הזנות.
- 17 ההין for ההון, after which we have a blank equal to the space of a short word.
- 21 אותם for אותם.
- p. 5, l. 3 נפתח twice, but the first is cancelled.
- 12 לאמר for לאמר.
- 13 זיקי for זיקות.
- 16 בעלילותם for בעלילותיהם.
- p. 6, l. 1 מאחר for מאחר.
- 2 ויקח for ויקח.
- 5 ויגורו for ויגורו.
- 10 הרשוע may be also read הרשוע.
- 18 לחול for לחול.
- p. 7, l. 5 יסורו may be also read יסורו.
- 8 היסורים may be also read היסורים.
- 16 Supply blank equal to space of short word after הנפלת.
- p. 8, l. 7 להין for להין.
- 10 Blank equal to space of one word after העמים.
- 17 הועירו may be also read הועירו.
- p. 9, l. 2 אמר. It seems that the scribe wrote originally אשר but corrected it into אמר.
- 3 רעהו for רעהו.

- Heb. p. 9, l. 14 The blank is before הכל, and it is not impossible that this word was cancelled by the scribe and corrected by the following וכן.
- 22 החוק for ההון.
- 22 בלו... for כלו..., but there is no real certainty about it.
- 23 יקום, but not certain. May perhaps also be read יקומי.
- p. 10, l. 15 Before השישי we have the letters מי cancelled by the scribe.
- 18 ודין may also be read ורין.
- 20 חפצו may also be read חפצי.
- p. 11, l. 2 כלי, but the י is hardly discernible now.
- 13 תפול may also be read תפיל.
- 23 ת... is very doubtful.
- p. 12, l. 3 כמשפט for במשפט.
- p. 13, l. 5 משפש for משפט.
- 10 דים, the letter ד very doubtful.
- 14 ברית אל ישאל אל יתן for ברית אל אל ישא ואל יתן. The first אל is probably to be pointed אל.
- 16 At the end of this line are traces of something like a ה and then of an א and a ל.
- 18 ענוהו very doubtful.
- 18 חט. The ט very doubtful.
- 18 יטה, may be read יטור. The ן after the ט is certain.
- 19 נקשר, the ר very uncertain.
- 22 ..ה looks something like השפטים. The ש and the ס are fairly certain.
- p. 14, l. 8 לחברם, may also be read לרברם.
- 14 ביד for בה.
- 16 After עבודת, room for one word before ולא. The last letter is still visible, representing a ד, something like a י preceding it. There is also some sign which may be taken as a פ. This would suggest the remainder or corruption of בפרך.
- 19 Before אהרן we have the letter ה, undoubtedly the remainder of משה.
- p. 15, l. 1 שבועה may also be read שבועת.
- 2 Some traces of such letters as זה and על, perhaps also פי, after כי at end of line.
- 5 The אש at end of line is followed by a ר thus making אשר. Then there are at the end some signs which may perhaps be taken as עו.

TEXT B.

- Heb. p. 19, l. 26 Between ועדתו and ואשר, blank of two words.
 35 ובכתבו, last letter of this word not quite certain.
- p. 20, l. 1 At the beginning of the line there are signs of some letters now illegible, but, as it would seem, they were cancelled by the scribe.
 12 Before ואמנה, sign of one or two letters cancelled by the scribe.
 20 After יעלה, sign of one or two letters cancelled.
 25 קדשו for קדש: followed by a blank of two words.
 33 אל חקי, doubtful.

ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS TO TRANSLATION AND NOTES

- P. 2, l. 7 Heb. מקדם עולם. Cf. Ps. 74 2, and Prov. 8 22 מקדמי ארץ.
- 10 Heb. עד מה. It was suggested to me by the Rev. J. A. Montgomery that it is probably equal to the Syriac עדמא, and has to be translated until that.
- p. 4, l. 8 Interpretation of the Law. Heb. כפירוש התורה cf. p. 6, ll. 14, 18 and 20, and p. 13, l. 6. On p. 20, l. 6 we have מדרש התורה. Cf. also p. 7, l. 18 about the דורש התורה. Cf. also p. 7, ll. 1, 2, and 3 where משפט seems = פירוש, the Sect insisting that the particular laws mentioned there (p. 6, l. 18—p. 7, l. 3) should be observed according to their own פירוש or משפט. This suggests the possibility of our having in p. 20, ll. 31 and 32 ... והתיסרו במשפטים and והתיסרו אשר נשפטו וכו' a parallel to our passage in p. 4, l. 8 והתיסרו would then mean "to be instructed." The פירוש or מדרש is contained in the Book of Jubilees and similar Apocrypha which the Sect considered authoritative.
- p. 5, l. 19 (note 35). In connection with this subject, the following extracts from the Jerahmeel MS. in Oxford, kindly copied for me by the Rev. M. Segal, will not be uninteresting:

ועוד שני אנשים מכשפים היו בהם ושמותם יוחני וממרא וכשנכנסו בים וראו שהמים מסבבין אותם מה עשו הרבו (?) בכשפיהם ופרחו באויר עד לרקיע ואין לך ברייה בעולם ומכשפים יותר ממצרים שכן אמרו חכמים עשרה קבין מכשפות ירדו לעולם תשעה נמלה מצרים ואחת לכל העולם כולו. והללו יוחני וממרא היו שרי כשפים ומרוב כשפים שהן יודעים היו עולין עד לרקיע ולא היו יכולין מיכאל וגבריאל לעשות להם כלום מיד צעקו מיכאל וגבריאל להבה בתחנינים ואמרו לפניו רבוננו של עולם רשעים הללו ששיעבדו בניך בשעבוד קשה עומדים כל כך לא היו חוששים אלא אף עליך הם עומדים ומניין שירד הקבה במצרים שנ' ארד עמך

מצרימה אלא אם רצונך רבון העולמים עשה דין לבניך מיד אמ' הקב"ה
למטטרון הורד אותם והפילם והוזהר שלא יפלו אלא בים מיד הפילם
מיטטרון בתוך הים בעל כרחן באותה שעה פתחו ישר' ואמרו שירה וברוב
גאונך תהרום קמ"ך

Cf. Dr Gaster, The Chronicles of Jerahmeel, LIV. and p. 159. London, 1899.

Cf. also ציוני Sec. וארא.

- p. 6, l. 2 Heb. ויקח, read ויקם, "and He raised up."
- p. 10, l. 18 (note 4). Cf. also Jub. 49 8, "or whoever says he will do something on it," but the meaning is not quite clear to me.
- p. 11, l. 10 (note 28). Perhaps מושבת is in contradistinction to מחולל, a term occurring sometimes in Karaitic literature. It would then mean even in a locality which has the advantage of being מושבת in which he may move all other things he must not move rock or earth.
- p. 12, l. 13 (note 4). Add—Meaning obscure. Perhaps we have in this law a protest against the Rabbinic interpretation of Lev. 11 36 according to which not only the fountain or pit remained clean but also the water therein. Cf. D. Hoffmann, Das Buch Leviticus, p. 349, and other commentaries ancient and modern.
- p. 15, l. 8 Heb. יפקרוהו. Perhaps it has here the meaning of "to remind him."
- p. 19, l. 12 Heb. נאנהים ונאנקים. An expression which the Karaites applied to their own sect. Cf. Pinsher, Lekute Kadmoniyoth Nispachim, p. 101.

Handwritten text in Hebrew script on a fragment of ancient parchment. The text is arranged in approximately 12 horizontal lines, though the fragment is irregularly shaped and partially damaged. The script is a cursive form, likely from the Talmudic or Geonic periods. The ink is dark, and the parchment is aged and textured. The text appears to be a continuous passage, possibly a legal or narrative text, given the use of words like 'ואמר' (and he said) and 'והוא' (and he).

מורה היחיד עד עמוד משיח מאהרן ומישראל וכן המשפט
 לכל באי עדת אנשי תמים הקדש ויקוץ מעשות פקודי ישרים
 הוא האיש הנתך בתוך כור : בהופע מעשיו ישלח מעדה
 כמו שלא נפל גורלו בתוך למודי אל כפי מעלו יזכירוהו אנשי
 5 מעות עד יום ישוב לעמד במעמד אנשי תמים קדש אשר אין
 גורלו בתוך ובהופע מעשיו כפי מדרש התורה אשר יתהלכו
 בו אנשי תמים הקדש אל יאזת איש עמו בהון ובעבודה
 כי אדרוהו כל קדושי עליון וכמשפט הזה לכל המאם בראשונים
 ובאהרונים אשר שמו גלולים על לבם וישמרו וילכו בשרירות
 10 לבם אין להם חלק בבית התורה : כמשפט רעיהם אשר שבו
 עם אנשי הלצון ישפטו כי דברו תועה על חקי הצדק ומאסו
 בברית ואמנה אשר קימו בארץ דמשק והוא ברית החדשה :
 ולא יהיה להם ולמשפחותיהם חלק בבית התורה ומיום
 האסף יוריה היחיד עד תם כל אנשי המלחמה אשר הלכו
 15 עם איש הכוב כשנים ארבעים : ובקץ ההוא יהרה
 אף אל בישראל כאשר אמר אין מלך ואין שר ואין שופט ואין
 מוכיח בצדק ושבי פשע י... שמרו ברית אל או... נד... איש
 אל לע... ל... אהיו את אחיו יתמך צעדס בדרך אל ויקשב
 אל דבריהם וישמע ויכתב ספר זכרון... ליראי אל להושבי
 20 שמו. עד יעלה ישע וצדקה ליראי אל ושבתם וראיתם בין צדיק
 ורשע בין עבד. ל לאשר לא עבדו : ועשה הסד... לאוהביו
 ולשמרו לאלף דור : מביתפלג אשר יצאו מעיר הקדש :
 וישענו על אל בקין מעל ישראל וממאו את המקדש ושבו עד
 אל : נסיד העם בדברים מעט... למ לפי רוחו ישפטו בעצת
 25 קדש : וכל אשר פרצו את גבול התורה מבאי הברית בהופע
 כבוד אל לישראל יכרתו מקרב המחנה ועמהם כל מרשיעי
 יהודה בימי מצרפותיו וכל המחזיקים במשפטים האלה לצאת
 ולבוא על פי התורה וישמעו לקול מורה ויתודו לפני אל... אנו
 רשענו... אנהנו גם אבותינו בלכתם קרי בהקי הברית
 30 ואמת משפטך בנו : ולא ירימו יד על חקי קדשו ומשפט
 צדקו ועדוות אמתו : והתיסרו במשפטים הראשונים—אשר
 נשפטו בני אנשי היחיד והאזינו לקול מורה צדק : ולא ישיבו
 אל חקי הצדק בשמעם אתם ישישו וישמהו ויעז לבם ויתגברו
 על כל בני תבל וכפר אל בעדם וראו בישועתו כי חסו בשם קדשו

נאמנות להם לחיותם לאלפי דורות : כב שומר הברית והחסד
 לאהב ולשמרי מצותי לאף דור : ואם מחנות ישבו כחוקי
 הארץ אשר היה מקדם ולקחו נשים במנהג התורה והולידו בנים
 ויתהלכו על פי התורה : וכמשפט היסודים כסרך התורה
 5 כאשר אמר ב' איש לאשתו ובין אב לבנו וכל המאסים במצות
 ובחקים להשיב גמול רשעים עליהם בפקד אל את הארץ
 בבוא הדבר אשר כתוב ביד זכריה הנביא הרב עזרי על
 רועי ועל גבר עמיתי נאם א הך את הרעה ותפוצינה הצאן
 והשיבותי ידי על הצוערים : והשומרים אותו הם עניי הצאן
 10 אלה ימלטו בקץ הפקדה והנשארים ימסרו לחרב בבוא משיח
 אהרן וישראל : כאשר היה בקץ פקדת הראשון אשר אמר יחזקאל
 ביד יחזקאל והתוהו התיו על מצחות נאנחים ונאנקים
 והנשארים הסגרו לחרב נוקמת נקם ברית : וכן משפט לכל באי
 בריתו אשר לא יחזיקו באלה החקים לפקדם לכלה ביד בליעל
 15 הוא היום אשר יפקד א כ' אשר דבר היו שרי יהודה כמשיגי
 גבול עליהם אשפך כמים עברה : כי באו בברית תשובה
 ולא סרו מדרך בוגדים ויתעללו בדרכי זנות ובהון הרשעה
 ונקום ונטור איש לאחיהו ושנא איש את רעהו ויתעלמו איש
 בשאר בשרו ויגשו לזמה ויתגברו להון ולבצע ויעשו את
 20 איש הישר בעיניו ויבחרו איש בשרירות לבו ולא נורו מעם
 ומחטאתם : ויפרעו ביד רמה ללכת בדרכי רשעים : אשר
 אמר א עליהם חמת תנינים יינם וראש פתנים אכזר : התנינים
 מלכי העמים ויינם הוא דרכיהם וראש פתנים הוא ראש
 מלכי יון הבא עליהם לנקם נקמה ובכל אלה לא הבינו בוני
 החיץ וטחי תפל כי הולך רוח ושקל מופת סופות ומטיף אדם
 25 לכזב אשר חרה אף אל בכל עדתו : ואשר אמר משה
 לישראל לא בצדקתך וביושר לבבך אתה בא לרשת את הגוים
 האלה כי מאהבתו את אבותיך ומשמרו את השבועה : כן
 משפט לשבי ישראל סרו מדרך העם באהבת אל את הראשנים
 30 אשר העידו על העם אחרי א ואהב את הבאים אחריהם כי להם
 ברית אבות ושונא ומתעב א את בני החיץ וחרה אפ אפו בם ובכל
 ההלכים אחריהם וכמשפט הזה לכל המאם במצות א

 בן סרר ישראל בעמוד איש הלצון אשר הטיף לישראל
 מימי כזב ויתעם בתוהו לא דרך להשח גבהות עולם ולסור
 15 מנתיבות צדק ולסיע גבול אשר גבלו ראשנים בנחלתם למען
 הדבק בהם את אלות בריתו להסגירם לחרב נקמת נקם
 ברית בעבור אשר דרשו בחלקות ויבחרו בַמְהַתְּלוֹת ויצפו
 לפרצות ויבחרו בטוב הצואר ויצדיקו רשע וירשיעו צדיק
 20 ויעבירו ברית ויפִירוּ הוֹק וַיְגֹדוּ עַל נֶפֶשׁ צָדִיק וּבְכָל הוֹלְכֵי
 תמים תעבה נפשם וירדפום לחרב וַיִּסְסוּ לְרִיב עִם ויחר אף

ועתה שמעו כל יודעי צדק ובינו במעשי
 אל כי ריב לו עם כל בשר ומשפט יעשה בכל מעליו
 כי במשפט אשר עשוהו הסתור פנו מישראל וממקדשו
 יתנם ביד ובזכרו סיות ראשנים השאר שאריות
 לישראל ולא נתנם לכלה ובקץ חרון שנים שלש מאות
 ותשעם לתות אותם ביד נבוכדנאצר מלך בבל
 פקדם וצנמח מישראל ומאחדן שורש מטעת ליוש
 אתארץ וירשון בטוב אדמתו ויביט בעומו וידע כי
 אנשים אשונים הם ויהיו בעורים ופיגוש שוים דרך
 ישנים עושים ויבן אל אל מעשיהם כי כלב שלם דר שמו
 ויקם להם מרה צדק להדריכם סדך לם וידע
 לו ובע אחזקים את אשר עשה בדור אחרון בעת בוגדים
 חכ סרו דרך היא העט אשר היה נטב עליו כפרת סורירה
 כמסדר ישראל בעמוד איש הלצון אשר הסקף לישראל
 מימי כזב ויתעם בתוהו לאדך להשחגבות עלם ולסור
 מנעבות צדק ולפע בטל אקד גדלו ראשנים בעולתם למען
 הוציבו את אילות ערות להסגרים לחרב נקמת נקם
 ביות בעבד אשר ידע בחלקות יסודו במהותלות ויפן
 לפירות ויבדח בטוב הצואר וינדקן רישע וירשע צדק
 ויעבדו סיות עבדו חוק וינודו של נפש עבד אלו
 תמים תעבה נפשם וירי פום לחרב ויסבו לריב עם וחדל אף
